CHRIS ROWE, right, gives his friend Robert Kirchenbauer, both of Carmel, a good hosing down while playing at the Carmel Youth Center recently. The two may soon discover that if they want to play with water they may have to go to Carmel Beach to do it. The city of Carmel has virtually reached its total water allocation for the past year; the city council has already enacted an emergency ordinance putting a moratorium on new building permits. The city is also urging tough water conservation methods from all segments of the community in order to keep its water use below its allocation. Other communities on the peninsula, as well as Monterey County, are also experiencing water problems. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Council to make plea to boost water allocation

By NANCY HILLS

'ALLOCATION' IS becoming a very familiar word to residents and developers in Carmel, but it's the number the word represents that many Carmelites want to change.

The city of Carmel is preparing to request the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to change the water allocation system as Carmel teeters on the edge of exceeding its water allotment. In the meantime, the city remains under a self-imposed building permit moratorium.

The debate centering on the changing of the allocation is a blizzard of numbers, statistics and projections that are rattled off as the results prove, then disprove, then bring to a stalemate each point for or against the allocation system as it now stands.

It's a war fought by calculators and the discussion could last as long as the batteries hold out. One thing major players on the field agree on — all the answers will be new.

"We're 'breaking ground' here," said Carmel staff Planner Brian Roseth. "This (allocation system) is unique. The entire water district is unique."

ty's arguments for changing the allocation during its 4 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 2, meeting at Carmel Woman's Club. If approved, those arguments will be presented to the water district board at its 7:30 p.m., Monday, Sept. 8 meeting in Monterey City Council chambers.

In the meantime, Carmel residents and business people ask themselves why this city, one which pioneered conservation laws on the peninsula, uses — statistically at least — less water per meter and has none of the large building projects like other areas within the water district, was the first to reach nearly 100 percent of its allocation.

Recent statistics on Carmel's water use show the city has used 99.99 percent of its water allocation from the water district and the city enacted an moratorium on all permits that would change water use.

But close on the heels of Carmel are other jurisdictions whose water use is at or close to 90 percent, many with planned building projects with permits that will bring them dangerously close to exceeding their own allocations. The cities of Monterey and Pacific Grove recently passed water conservation ordinances similar to Carmel's and urgency ordinance to stop subdivisions on lots within the water district.

ORIGINALLY DERIVED in 1981 by adding existing water use to projected future water needs, the allocation divided 18,600 ac. ft. of water the district made available for allocation between six cities and the portions of Monterey County within the district.

It was a planning tool for the jurisdictions and the water district, explained Roseth, therefore subject to occasional revision.

The points the city will argue on, Roseth said, include:

- The water district underestimated average existing water use. For that number, the district used 1979, a year when water use was significantly lower due to a recently-ended drought, Roseth contends. Projected existing use should have been around 16,500 ac. ft., rather than the 15,000 ac. ft. the district used, he said.

- Projected future growth did not include expansion of existing uses through remodeling and increase in the number of people per household. The only growth the district considered was new meters and uses for single-and the number of employees that would come with growth, Roseth said.

- The way the district decided to develop the allocations penalizes the jurisdictions already developed.

The district originally had 20,000 ac. ft. to allocate, but it removed 7 percent for non-metered use. That reduced the total amount to be allocated to 18,600 ac. ft. When the district adjusted each allocation down to meet that total, it treated projected growth equally with existing use. Roseth said he feels that the reduction should have only been on the projected growth totals.

- There have been major changes in master and general plans and changes in administrations within many of the jurisdictions. Those changes have changed projected growth figures, Roseth said.

HOWEVER, BRUCE Buel, water district general manager, said he believed the city will have to change the philosophy behind the allocation — the water would be divided as the projected future market dictated — to effect a change in the division.

The district, Buel added, did

If the shoe fits

Dear Editor:

Just when we were sure that Paul Laub had won the sleaze award for the third time and was on target for the permanent retirement of the trophy, along comes a real challenger, the Bavarian (?) Shop in Carmel, and the cutesy, clever Clintville, U.S.A. T-shirts and signs.

These two Bavarians, one a real estate agent — with listings throughout Bavaria, I suppose — seem determined to make a fight of it and, after seeing their picture in the Pine Cone, I, for one, would not like to be in Laub's shoes. But, come to think of it ...

Rude performance

Dear Editor:

Carmel's council meeting, Aug. 6, played to a full house, at least in its early stages. A big crowd, tourists and residents, waited a half hour or longer outside the locked doors of the Woman's Club. Several police cars gave the passersby the idea that there had been an accident or something. Five minutes before the 4 p.m. starting time, police opened the doors. And then the gathered sat and waited. Mayor Eastwood and a councilwoman were 15 minutes late, and at 4:20 the meeting began. There was neither an explanation nor apology.

It was all a very jovial affair. The mayor quipped and chatted with the city attorney, and others, throughout the meeting, but most particularly when residents were addressing the council. Resolutions, decisions, were hurried through, more often than proper with little or no discussion, certainly with impatience. One had a very distinct impression that "running through fast, brooking no interference" was the order of the day.

It was a rude performance, even if the mayor and his new pals found all that boring stuff pretty good fun if you didn't let it get to you. And it didn't.

Book sale a success

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library, I am writing to thank you for the publicity you were kind enough to give our recent book sale.

Thanks to your help, we can report a most successful sale, the funds from which will be of great benefit to the library.

Unwelcome changes

Dear Editor:

As a resident of Carmel since 1952, I have seen many changes in our community, both positive and negative. The greatest unwelcome change has been the attitude of "new" merchants coming into our village.

Gone are the days of being greeted by a smile and called by name. Twice in the last few months, I have had to stop frequenting a cleaners and a bakery, which I have used for more than 20 years.

The out-of-town people who have taken over these businesses are unconcerned about their local customers, considering tourists more important. As the manager of a small downtown shop, we take great pride in being warm and friendly to everyone!

Arrogant criticism

Dear Editor:

A letter by Ben Heller was published in the Pine Cone Aug. 14 ("Arrogance of Power"), criticizing the Mayor of Carmel and by ominous warning prophesying evil deeds.

The letter is personally nervous and privately cathartic. Apparently, Mr. Heller's political Ouija board is suffering anxieties over some of the mayor's moves to align his administration and establish a political atmosphere for effective action. That's what he promised the voters last spring, that's what he is giving them now.

Mr. Heller criticized the mayor for dropping the lawsuits. I am not privy to Mayor Eastwood's motives, but as an observer I personally consider this move one of his best so far. It opens the way to civilized negotiations between neighboring partners rather than trying to beat one another into legal pulp in a court of law. Whether the residents wish it or not, Carmel is inextricably bound with others into the future of this peninsula. Having fully developed one's own area, true arrogance lies in then telling one's neighbors they should not.

But I didn't come to this page to write a defense of the mayor. I write to suggest that Mayor Eastwood is not the culprit in your quixotic battle against a changing world indifferent to your will. He has done nothing to offend you — you were already offended. Grievance was rusting in your soul long before last April. You have been irritated and frustrated by growth that is a force beyond the jurisdiction of any council or general plan. Local history will support that notion. Rather than seek a scapegoat for your frustration, you might do well to indulge in a little "reality confrontation" and realize that living in Carmel was never a guarantee for endless insulation.

I appreciate and sympathize with the fact that your lifestyle by the sea is deteriorating. It is an observable and emotional fact. But if you think you can legislate this condition away, that it can be ordered into submission, belayed by court order or moratorium, then I suggest that you are entertaining desperate delusions. Social forces are far stronger than walls of statutes, of stones, or of pure imagination. If you are still thinking in terms of 20 or 30 years ago or of a mandate pronounced in 1929, then you may be behaving on a belief in images that have no or little substance left in present reality.

Carmel is no longer a quaint village isolated from a larger and less desirable environment. Indifferent to your covenant with the sea and cypress, the world continues to swell and press upon you, encroach on your privacy, pinch your freedoms, just as it persistently presses upon all of us. Masses of visitors inadvertently pollute your garden and disturb your peace, while insidious disdain for human values permeating a larger climate disturbs mine.

Materialist values promised that one could buy protection and insulation from others of our own species, while at the same time they have been promising all others the same cake. So they lied to us! Are you truly surprised?

Let us not whine like infants because the world does not arrange itself in accord with our personal wishes. I'd like to have a dollar for every pound of groaning that echoes through these pines. The merchants groan because they never make enough money, the residents moan because the world won't stand still; basically, people who thrive on discontent groan a lot. Much credit goes to the council members for facing difficult problems as well as they can without crying over them.

Don't expect Mayor Eastwood to be a magician. He did not create the present situation that rubs against you so. He is an elected politico now, not a balm for every private wound that can't wait to fester in the social woodwork. You really want to protect what's left of your lifestyle, Mr. Heller? Try encouraging cooperative effort, not threatening cock-in-the-ring gestures for battle. You won't lose your right to dissent. Some things will go your way, some won't; that's the political game, and it demands flexibility. The Big Sur factions are just learning now that partnership is their best and possibly their only chance for survival.

Any supposition that the new mayor will aggravate the situation further has no substance at this time and is based upon your own fears and your own inability to adapt to a world in rapid flux. In four months of office the Mayor of Carmel has done nothing to warrant arrogant criticism.

Withdraws from party

Dear Editor:

When I ran for Mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea against Clint Eastwood, I represented my own personal interpretation of what The Environmentalist Party "stood" for. But now I have come to conclude that the idea of belonging to any party, such as The Environmentalist Party, springs from an irrational urge to belong to a group just to survive in a hostile, dog-eat-dog environment.

The fact is, that none of us agreed on what direction to pursue in our strategy so the entire campaign for Mayor of Carmel just collapsed. And I saw what being the Mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea really meant, because the election became a volley of demagoguery.

My disillusionment with The Environmentalist Party's cause is based on the corporate media smear campaign that I experienced. It was not worth it. I had to pay the price of free speech, and anyone who stands up for their rights as Americans will suffer the same fate. Consequently, by fighting in court with the corporate oil industrialists over the Spanish Bay project, my singing career was sacrificed.

I have disbanded from The Environmentalist Party, and I encourage other misled voters to similarly dissent, and challenge the true integrity of the Constitution of the United States, i.e., the sanctity and efficacy of individual rights. No one else can save my spiritual being.

Harmful fish

Dear Editor:

I've been noticing the warnings issued concerning the danger inherent in eating fish from the San Francisco Bay Delta region.

Sturgeon are now suspect and Delta catfish are swimming around with mercury poisoning in their systems.

Now no children or pregnant women should ever eat striped bass from the Bay Delta region and nobody, no matter how healthy, should eat more than one meal per week of striped bass from the same area.

Our popular Lake Nacimiento to the south is not immune either. No children or pregnant women should eat largemouth bass from this lake because of possible mercury poisoning and no one should eat more than one meal per week of this popular fish. I would hope the lake is posted.

These warnings are contained in our California Fish and Game laws. Seems to me this is pretty important as it is highly improbable that children and pregnant women would be reading these warnings.

As a kid, I fished these waters 60 years ago and what we've done to this fragile area is pretty close to criminal.

Running for office

Dear Editor:

Just two weeks ago, I filed my nomination papers for Mayor of Pacific Grove for the Nov. 4, 1986, election. The experience that Tim Grady had with the newspapers, magazines and television broadcasts were a valuable lesson for the other candidates like myself. I gave up on filing the papers to be a candidate for Governor of California because I couldn't get the money to pay the filing fee for this esteemed public office.

Running for a local public office like mayor is like a rerun movie, and I feel that the politicians in our state legislature deliberately fixed the election procedure to make it impossible for Americans like me to run for governor, or for any state legislative office in California.

This is how the Democrats-Republicans entrenched themselves to exclude their competition. This Democratic-Republican conspiracy is just one example of the "special deal" politics that they indulge in to maintain their hypocritical double standards. This kind of legislation is highly un-American and it smacks of being unconstitutional. However, considering the fact that most voters don't vote, and the ones that do vote don't always vote intelligently, I suppose that they won't mind another rerun movie.

I really wanted to run for governor of California and I even turned in more than 100 signatures on that nomination petition. I guess I owe an apology to all those faithful consignatories who signed my petition to get me on the November ballot as a candidate in the gubernatorial election.

Secure your pet

Dear Editor:

A letter to the editor in your Aug. 14 issue about an accident in which two dogs fell from the back of a moving pick-up truck warrants further comment.

Accidents such as this happen more often than people think. We at the Monterey County SPCA know because we often pick up the dead and injured animals at the scene.

Not only does securing your pet in the back of a truck make good sense, it's the law!

The Monterey County SPCA has a handout showing the safe and proper way to secure your pet. Contact us at 373-2631 for a free copy.

Don't risk your pet's safety, other motorists' safety or getting a citation. Secure your pet each and every time.

Fouling the nest

Dear Editor:

I've been a frequent visitor to Carmel for many years. I've loved the place and wished I could make it my home. Well, it's become a mess. I was devoted to Carmel, not Clintville, which is everything Carmel isn't wasn't and should never have become.

What's happened and who's responsible? The streets are dirty, too many shops are carrying junk, in shameful contrast to those that still carry quality goods. It's getting worse, and fast. Isn't there something that somebody can do? If this is the change Carmel voters had in mind, they should have moved someplace else rather than foul their own nest.

Are skateboarders headed for rough landing?

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IN THE summer of 1985's biggest hit movie, Back to the Future, Michael J. Fox eludes a gang of bullies by converting an old scooter into a skateboard.

To some Carmel kids, that gang of bullies may very well be the city council.

The council will consider controls on skateboards when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 2 at the Carmel Woman's Club, southwest corner of San Carlos Street and Eighth Avenue.

Also on the council agenda are a couple of cleanup items regarding the Harrison Memorial Library annex and underground parking garage, a report on public restrooms at Carmel Beach and in Piccadilly Park, a proposed definition of adequate parking and final reading of an ordinance loosening restrictions on ice cream parlors.

It seems that skateboarding is the sport of the 1980s generation, facing the problems of the 1980s in a town where some people still live in the 1920s.

Serious skateboarders leave the bicycle in the garage and use their custom-made boards as transportation.

But as popularity of the sport grew, so too did the number of clashes between pedestrians, cars and skateboarders. According to Police Chief Jack McGilvray, there's been two recent injury accidents involving skateboarders in Carmel.

"It's a serious safety concern to us," said the chief, who is working on a report to the council.

According to City Administrator Doug Schmitz and the chief, the city is trying to work out some guidelines for skateboarders rather than adopt a blanket prohibition on riding. The city currently prohibits skateboards in the commercial zone, but riding is allowed in the residential district.

If the council agrees with those guidelines, skateboarders will be given time to adhere to the new rules or a ban would be the next step.

The question of what to do about skateboards poses quite a quandary for the city because of the real possibility of injury in case of an accident.

Although many of the riders stop at intersections, there are those, especially going down Eighth Avenue, who fail to exercise proper caution. Others sit on their boards, making it nearly impossible to be seen by motorists.

There has been talk by the Carmel Youth Center of offering a place, such as a school playground, for skateboarders. But insurance, even if it could be obtained, is prohibitive, according to board member Merv Sutton.

THE CITY is self-insured, so any suc-

YOUNGSTERS CRUISE down Fourth Avenue on their skateboards — a sport that may be soon disappear in Carmel because of recent complaints and accidents. The Carmel City Council is considering setting restrictions on skateboarders for safety reasons at cessful major court case could spell financial disaster for Carmel.

But this new council majority of Mayor Clint Eastwood and Councilmembers Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer did run on an election platform of getting rid of what they saw as a "killjoy mentality."

As Eastwood said, "On one hand it is dangerous. On the other hand, I hate to be a killjoy. There are few things they have to do. Carmel does lend itself to skateboards because it's a city built on a hill."

Jeff Bell, the paid director at the youth center, thinks something could be done.

Bell pointed out that some cities such as Venice Beach and Del Mar, have programs for skateboarders so "why not Carmel?"

Skateboarding is "an avocation that they really love" and the city should try to establish some guidelines that would permit riding, Bell added.

Eastwood said it would be "great" if a spot could be found for safe, supervised riding. "The more activities there are for kids, great."

If the city prohibits skateboarders, many riders probably will ignore the ban while other youngsters will just "hang out" at the park or beach, several skateboarders said while riding outside the youth center Tuesday afternoon.

"What else would I be doing?," said 12-year-old Lawrence Roeck. "I'd probably just be hanging out in the park... There's nothing else to do."

Sky Feekes, 12, agreed. "It would be boring. I don't think it's a very good idea," he said, while friend Victor Klinger, 11, added, "I'd just sit around at home."

They admit that there are some "reckless" riders but the city shouldn't punish everyone because of the actions of a few.

"We don't do anything that's dangerous," said Gannon Ogden, 12. "We don't run in front of cars. We have an eye out for cars. I think bikes are more dangerous, they just go whizzing through stop signs."

Jimmy Mort, 13, thinks that the alternative to skateboarding is worse.

"If the city outlaws it, what are we supposed to do? It's better than hanging out in the park and getting stoned," he said.

In other action Tuesday, the council will:

- Consider an agreement with Pine Inn for the hiring of an architect for the underground parking garage to be developed in conjunction with the Harrison Memorial Library annex.

- Defer any discussion on how to pay for $80,000 worth of off-site improvements for the annex until a final overall financial plan is developed.

- Consider adopting on second reading an ordinance loosening restrictions on ice cream parlors.

- Receive a preliminary report on a proposed $700,000 plan to build about 35 parking spaces underneath the proposed senior citizen housing complex project on Dolores Street.

- Hear a presentation by members of the Conflict Resolution and Mediation Center of Monterey County.

- Award service pins to city employees Ross Brown and William Uretsky.

- Discuss a request to pave the portion of Second Avenue between North Casanova Street and Camino Real.

- Hear a report on plans for the city's 70th birthday party festivities. Carmel turns 70 Oct. 31.

- Appoint a member to the Hatton Canyon Freeway Advisory Committee to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Gene Hammond. The committee has not met for several months and is not expected to until the draft environmental impact statement is released sometime after mid-September.

- Hear a presentation by Robert Wind on the Children and Animal Survival Assistance program.

- Receive a report detailing insurance responsibilities concerning tree service businesses.

Monterey County has own water problems

CARMEL is not the only one with serious water problems — just ask the county of Monterey.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors — fearing a water shortage crisis in the magnitude now faced by the city of Carmel — is developing an emergency ordinance to prohibit all new subdivisions in the unincorporated areas of the Monterey Peninsula.

The ordinance, however, would not affect existing lots of record and projects with use permits, such as the Spanish Bay and Carmel Valley Ranch hotels.

However, the ordinance could stall some projects in the planning process, such as the 80 Spanish Bay condominiums and the 15 new homes as part of Carmel Meadows II.

The draft ordinance could be designed to remain in effect until new water sources are found, most likely the years-away reclamation plant and Carmel River dam.

Supervisors have scheduled a hearing for 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 2 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Meanwhile, the California Coastal Commission staff believes that the county has erred in its water calculations in the land use plan for Del Monte Forest. If the Coastal Commission staff is correct, there is only enough water available for 207 of the 277 existing lots of record in Pebble Beach.

Discussion on that issue will take place as part of some technical amendments to the Del Monte Land Use Plan before the Coastal Commission Sept. 12 in San Francisco.

According to figures released by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the county has used about 90 percent of its 6,501 ac. ft. allocation.

The water district is empowered to issue a moratorium on all water meter connections if a city or the county exceeds the allocation. Just last month Carmel faced such a moratorium until an audit of the figures indicated that the city used 99.9 percent of its supply. The city went ahead and issued a temporary ban on new building anyway. (See related story, this issue.)

The county ordinance, discussed by the board Aug. 26, is proposed by Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who wants to avoid any repetition of Carmel's problems.

Strasser Kauffman represents the areas that will be hardest hit by any moratorium — unincorporated Carmel, Carmel Valley, parts of Carmel Highlands and Del Monte Forest.

Strasser Kauffman told the Pine Cone Tuesday night that the proposed ordinance will "give us some breathing space" to develop more long-range planning on water supply and development.

THE COUNTY metered use in calendar year 1985-86 was 5,810 of its allocated 6,501 ac. ft.

All but 89 ac. ft. of the unused water supply is committed to existing lots of record and projects that have been approved but not completed.

Strasser Kauffman is fearful that the extra 89 ac. ft. could be gobbled by increased use, especially at the Poppy Hills and Spanish Bay golf course and by intensification of uses, such as two families living in one home.

The proposed ordinance banning new subdivisions would effectively create a buffer of 89 ac. ft. to guard against these fluctuations she said.

Strasser Kauffman does not anticipate any relief from restrictions imposed because of the water supply problems until new sources are found.

In that regard, she plans to push for a November 1986 vote on a new dam on the Carmel River rather than waiting a year as has been proposed by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Additional supply also could be generated by the proposed Carmel Sanitary District reclamation plant that would treat sewage and sell the reclaimed water to area golf courses for irrigation.

A plant reclaiming 1.3 million gallons of effluent per day would produce 1,500 ac. ft. of reclaimed water annually, according to Carmel Sanitary District Manager Michael Zambory.

Strasser Kauffman did stress that her priority is to ensure that all existing lots of record are provided water.

She also noted that in the future any project will include details of water use for the county to consider before approval.

THE 1981 Monterey Peninsula Water Management District chart above shows the breakdown of water allocations. The first column gives the existing water use in 1979 with the district used as a base. That use was added to the projected use. Projected use was determined by multiplying the number of anticipated homes, apartments, condominiums and employees by the average metered use in the year 1979 for each type of development. The projected growth figures were developed by consultant Dick Recht in conjunction with the planning departments of each community. The total in column 14 is the total projected use by year 2000 and column 15 is the percent of that total for each jurisdiction. That percent was multiplied by the total water supply allocated, 18,600 ac. ft., to find the jurisdiction's allocation. AF stands for acre feet, DU for dwelling unit.

'Water allocation' becoming familiar words underestimate the increase in water use by peninsula residents and that water use has returned to pre-drought levels. However, he said, that would not change the basic allocations. Everyone's water use has increased, therefore, everyone's allocation would change upward.

The district did assume that water conservation habits developed during the 1976-1977 drought would prevail and keep water use down, Buel explained, but that has not happened. People are now using water at the same rate they did before the drought. Because Carmel did not project much growth when the allocation was set, most of the city's allotment was based on existing use. When existing use increased, it quickly used up the reserve for growth.

Other jurisdictions that had projected more growth, have larger unused portions of water to buffer the effect of an increase in existing use, Buel explained. Their growth, however, will have to be curtailed too, as the county is now doing, to make up for the increase in existing use.

quires more than shifting around numbers. Water district board Chairman Dick Heuer has made the point both in and out of board meetings that to increase one city's allotment there will either have to be an increase in the amount of water that is available to be divided or water would have to be taken from another jurisdiction.

Since the peninsula relies on a closed water system (its water supply comes from the Carmel River watershed and the Seaside aquifer), the first option, Heuer has said, would leave the peninsula more vulnerable to drought.

The second option is up to the other cities and the county. A change in the allocation would require the agreement of the cities of Monterey, Seaside, Del Rey Oaks, Sand City, Pacific Grove and Monterey County, which comprise the water district. Both Seaside and Sand City have major hotel projects planned that will use much of their unused water allotment, projects that the cities maintain they need for economic development.

According to David Laredo, water district counsel, while the board is not legally bound policy to ask them for direction on policy matters regarding the allocations.

Those recommendations are made to the board by the Technical Advisory Committee, consisting of members of the planning departments of the jurisdictions, and the Policy Advisory Board, representatives of the policymakers in each jurisdiction.

FOR AN increase in the "water pie" of available water for allocation, the district would either have to:

- Store water that flows out to the sea through the Carmel River and aquifer.

Currently, the water district is working to bring the proposed San Clemente Dam to a vote, probably in 1988. If peninsula voters decide to fund the $46 million dam, the earliest it would be ready is 1993. Completion of the dam could be delayed even longer if there are any legal problems, such as challenges at State Water Rights hearings.

- Increase the potable (drinkable) water supply by using reclaimed water from sewage for irrigation of golf courses and greenways.

The district is negotiating with resort developers, such as Pebble Beach Co. for its Spanish Bay golf course and the Northern California Golf Association's Poppy Hills course, to help fund a water reclamation project for the peninsula. However, reclaimed water is costly, requires a separate water delivery system and would also not be ready for years.

- Increase the drought vulnerability on the peninsula by allocating water that is now held in reserve.

THE ALLOCATION system, as it now devised, divides the available water for the peninsula between the jurisdictions for their current and future water use. How the water is used internally within those jurisdictions is up to each jurisdiction's policy boards.

Projects such as Spanish Bay resort development in Pebble Beach were decisions made by the previous Monterey County Board of Supervisors as was the Monterey Sheraton Hotel a decision by the city of Monterey.

Once the land use permits are given by the jurisdiction, the water district must provide the water connection permit if the jurisdiction's water use is still within its allocation, the project is within the California-American Water Co. system and the developers can pay the water connection fees.

(Editor's Note: Nancy Hills will continue to analyze Carmel and the rest of the peninsula's water allocation problems in Part II in next week's Pine Cone.)

BEHIND THE LINES

BY MICHAEL GARDNER

Behind the scenes

SHERRY ALLEN didn't watch Back to the Future on the nearly five-hour flight from San Francisco to New York City — she was too busy worrying about the present.

Rob Carver had a window seat on the plane, but he didn't spend time admiring the scenery — he was too busy preparing for a fight to save his own backyard.

Allen and Carver were two of the 20-member contingent from the Friends of the Big Sur Coast hand-picked for an all-expenses-paid trip to Washington, D.C., not to see the Smithsonian or Jefferson Memorial, but to see to it that Sen. Pete Wilson's bill does not become part of history.

The jury, or should I say the committee, is still out on whether the efforts by Friends succeeded. The senate went on vacation before its subcommittee voted on whether Wilson's bill should move onto the floor of the Senate.

However, the strategies employed by the Friends of the Big Sur Coast provide a "How to" textbook example of legislative lobbying that would make even Michael Deaver proud.

On the airplane Allen and Carver were reading over their packet of materials that would have dwarfed a hardbound copy of War and Peace.

Each packet contained separate color-coded notebooks: yellow for letters of opposition, red for background information and a copy of Wilson's 1982 letter opposing federalization, green for Monterey County's damning independent analysis and newspaper editorials siding with Friends, and blue for reports on the value of local autonomy versus federal control.

It was like the Funk and Wagnell's of the Big Sur coast. Like they say, the best defense is a good offense.

The offense began the next morning as Friends gathered in a conference center at the Capitol Hill hotel for an all-day briefing session. It became the proverbial smoke-filled room as President Jim Josoff led his clan through the packets and detailed strategy.

What to say and how to say it became the catchwords as they ran through the packet of information ensuring accuracy and a thorough understanding of the issues by each member.

The "war room," as it became known, contained two telephones and a computer used near dawn by those who had not finished their written testimonies. With 75 copies of each testimony needed within three days, the open hours of the corner copy store became committed to memory, stored alongside the estimated number of visitors to the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Ben Parks, a lobbyist representing individuals who have property interests inside government land boundaries, also was on hand.

Parks provided an off-the-record, senator by senator account of their idiosyncrasies.

Parks may have told Friends how to act once they were able to see a senator, congressman or aide, but getting in the door was another question.

That's where an anonymous supporter became so important — a behind-the-scenes player who has stocked the coffers of many a Republican candidate with nary a mention of her name in the media. She is the kind of heavyweight who can call President Reagan "Ronnie" on his private telephone line.

A few select telephone calls from her put the Friends of the Big Sur Coast into the offices of senators whose doors usually are kept locked. And a selective dropping of her name turned a reluctant aide into a back-slapping buddy.

Another improbable ally was Preston Backer, who at 16 months old was the

PRESTON BACKER, at 16 months, was the youngest and probably most effective lobbyist for the Friends of the Big Sur Coast, youngest lobbyist there. Even the most hardened and experienced secretaries softened access with one look at Preston's baby face and "One Big Brother Is Enough" comedic T-shirt.

The results of each of the meetings — mostly with aides — were duly reported at a "debriefing" conducted each evening at 6 o'clock.

Divided into teams of three or four members each, the Friends rated the lawmaker from poor to excellent according to the response. John Harlan of Lucia kept notes on a big yellow legal tablet.

The Friends concentrated on senators at first, since that was the side of the Hill the battle would be fought on first. Besides, they knew they had an ally in Rep. Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley.

They used Panetta to their advantage, whose Coastal Partnership idea was pushed as the local control alternative in these days of decentralizing government.

The Friends also acknowledged the importance of the media.

It was Pebble Beach's Donna Marek who had the task of press relations. She had cauliflower ear from ringing newspapers and television stations from the Washington Post to KRON-TV in San Francisco. Unfortunately for Marek and friends, only KRON and USA Today (and yours truly of course) attended the press conference an hour before the committee hearing.

After the hearing, press coverage still was disappointing, especially that provided by the L.A. Times; copies of the article were at every seat in the war room the next morning. Still, USA Today was the only major newspaper to pick up that the Reagan administration opposed the bill. Copies of the eight-inch-long story hung on the walls.

But the hearing was only the beginning. Immediately, the teams regrouped and continued to meet with legislators. They even swapped lists so that each senator's office was contacted three times by three different teams.

As Tuesday, the final day, neared, the Friends sat nervously. A telegram had arrived saying that an advisory group to Gov. Deukmejian had recommended he oppose the bill. But Deukmejian did not come through, and a valuable piece of ammunition was lost.

Friends also tried to use their anonymous supporter to get inside the White House. A quick photo and one-minute statement by Reagan would probably break Wilson's bill.

Again, disappointment. Friends did get in to the White House that Tuesday, but only for a tour along with thousands of other tourists.

Still, as each member looked forward to sleeping on the flight back rather than poring over testimonies and reports, the trip appeared to be successful. Sen. Alan Cranston softened his stand and word in the House of Representatives was that as long as Panetta opposes the legislation there is no way it will be approved by the full Congress.

Now back for a couple of weeks, Friends has regrouped. Just early last week Josoff and Harlan went to Sacramento to lobby the state Chamber of Commerce. And 50 top California newspapers will be contacted by the end of this month in hopes of prompting editorials against Wilson's bill.

CLOSER TO HOME?

Up in Wallace, Idaho, visiting the silver mine there I became concerned that the parking meter would expire before I returned. After all, $10 is $10.

But I was not-so-discreetly informed that Wallace desperately needs its tourism so the common practice is police ignore expired meters for cars with out-of-state plates.

And those Idahoans who don't live in Wallace merely have to show up at the chamber of commerce office and the ticket will be "fixed," so to speak.

Meanwhile, on Cannery Row it's a quarter for every 30 minutes and in Carmel, well, enough said already.

A TOUR OF CITY HALL

If this is Thursday, it must be Carmel City Hall.

Some of us would like to know who the mucky-muck is who gave the OK for a 25-member contingent Japanese tour to occupy the city council chambers at about 1:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 21.

The tour itself wasn't so bad, but what about that giant bus parked in front of city hall with the engine running?

Next thing you know, the loyal opposition's fears that city hall will become a regular timed stop on tours will come true.

DON'T BLAME CLINT

Did anyone notice the $5,000 appropriated by the council earlier this month to remodel the mayor's office? I did.

Seems that former Mayor Charlotte Townsend had big plans for a spiffy work enclave. Now, the city is carrying out the remodeling, basically for new furniture.

Does tight-fisted fiscal conservative Hizoner agree that the five grand remodeling is necessary?

SPEAKING OF . . .

There always are a few jokes about the rich city but now I can offer proof!

The city has so many outstanding uncashed checks written to its employees that a policy had to be adopted by the council now requiring all payroll checks be cashed within a six-month period.

I don't know about you, but when my publisher signs that check, it's as good as cashed.

MORE MONEY MATTERS

Speaking of money, there is a proposition on the November ballot that could directly affect Carmel in the years to come.

Prop. 62 basically would require voter approval of all tax increases on the local level. Tax hikes are not exactly popular with voters these days.

The big concern in Carmel revolves around the hostelry tax, which has been one of the big ticket items for city coffers.

When Carmel Beach was practically destroyed, the council simply passed an ordinance to hike the bed tax from 8 to 10 percent to finance the repairs and replace the antiquated storm drainage system. If a walkway plan is ever completed, that entire beach project price tag could reach around $2 million.

But should Prop. 62 pass cities, Carmel included, probably would hesitate to cut the motel tax for fear voters would never permit an increase in the future.

(Note: The courts have ruled that Prop. 62 does not apply to the state's 82 charter cities, but Carmel is a general law city so it would be required to abide by the initiative.)

SPRECHEN SIE DEUTSCHE?

Our continuing journey around the world in search of "Clint clips" leads us to Limburg, Germany.

In that city's newspaper a small story appeared with Clint's mug shot circled in red ink. The article, and translation, is provided courtesy of Carmel's Woody Mark:

"One hundred day Mayor Clint Eastwood

(56-years-old) cleans up his hometown Carmel-by-the-Sea (California, 4,800 inhabitants) like "Dirty Harry." Building committee fired. New parking lots started. Steps to the beach repaired. Wheelchair paths. Clint Eastwood stopped the prohibition of ice cream places, ladies may now for the first time prance in high heel shoes."

IMPEACH CLINT?

It is not the loyal opposition marketing those "Save Carmel — Impeach Clint" bumperstickers advertised herein.

The bumpersticker is the brainchild of one Ray Mungo of Carmel Highlands, who baseball buffs will know as the author of Confessions from Left Field and programmer of the computer game, Real Baseball.

Ray, in between laughing about the whole thing, told a few tales about his bumpersticker, one being that while he was stopped for a traffic light in Monterey a man jumped out of his car, left the engine running in traffic and demanded, "I've got to have one."

"I did this thing for a laugh. I'm getting a lot of laughs out of it," said Ray.

But some folks aren't laughing. Ray says the bumpersticker is on sale at some stores in Monterey, but so far Carmel merchants have refused to carry it. "They're all afraid of Dirty Harry," he laughed. "I can't believe people are taking this seriously."

Ray can't vote in Carmel and wasn't even in the country on election day. "We were in France during the election," he recalls. "It was on the front page of every European newspaper. I didn't even have to leave Paris to know he won."

But Ray may be hearing from Clint. Hizoner, getting rather bored with all of the commercialization of his name, tells me that he wishes this kind of thing would "go away."

It won't, Clint acknowledges, so he asks that Ray at least donate some of the proceeds to the Carmel Youth Center, as is the case with most of the other merchants whose bank accounts have ballooned since Jan. 30 when Clint announced his candidacy.

I don't know about you, but with only 500 bumperstickers available, I've mailed my $10 ($2 each) for five stickers postpaid to PO Box 22438, Carmel, 93922.

City got its rec program for a song and dance

By MICHAEL GARDNER

FOR LESS than the price of a Saturday afternoon matinee each, the city of Carmel was able to provide a complete year-round recreation program for 1,284 area youngsters and adults.

According to projected figures released by outgoing Supervisor Steve Taylor, the city spent $2.74 for each participant in the Carmel Recreation Program from August 1985 to the present.

The numbers are an added bonus as the city readies to re-form its long-absent (26 years) recreation commission and also begins formal working ties with the Carmel Youth Center for the first time ever.

The Carmel City Council at its Sept. 2 session is expected to approve the formation of a recreation commission and also enter into a joint operating agreement with the youth center. The session will be at 4 p.m. at the Carmel Woman's Club, southwest corner of San Carlos Street and Eighth Avenue.

With the new youth center agreement and recreation commission ready to come in, Taylor is bowing out after steering the city's program through its initial years.

Taylor projects that the summer program costs will total $33,447 while user fees brought in $35,963. That amounts to a $2,515 net profit.

By subtracting the $2,515 summer profit from the $6,037 costs of the winter and spring activities, Taylor predicts that the total expense this year will come to $6,037.

Taylor then counted the number of participants and subtracted those who used the program more than once to come up with an enrollment of 1,284 adults and students.

Simple division then indicated that the city spent just $2.74 for each participant over the course of the year, Taylor said.

"I was expecting to maybe break even for the summer," said a somewhat surprised Taylor as he reviewed the net profit with the Pine Cone Monday morning.

Taylor, a Carmel River School teacher who will help initiate the winter program while the city searches for a full-time recreation director, says the key to the success of the program has been its smallness.

"I think it was the quality. We really were not worrying about the size, growing to a par with Monterey. We weren't trying to get big," Taylor explained.

"When you're small, you can give more attention to the kids...It's also the staff. We didn't hire just whoever we could get, but people were actively recruited and personally interviewed."

TAYLOR is enthusiastic about the pending recreation commission and joint operating agreement with the youth center.

"It's a great move," he said. "This is long-term planning. This is the key to quality in the future."

The recreation committee that has been meeting to recommend activities the past couple of years deserves much praise, Taylor said.

"They've really pulled this whole thing together. We wouldn't be where we are without the extra time and effort these people have put in...It's a priceless attribute to have them in the community."

If approved by the city council next week, the commission will oversee the joint city-school district recreation program that begins the second week of September.

The commission will work with the Carmel Youth Center through the new full-time recreation director. Under a joint operating agreement approved by the youth center and before the council next week, the city will pay for a full-time recreation director who will help coordinate activities at the center as well as on school district campuses.

The recreation commission is separate from the cultural commission, which will retain autonomy over the numerous popular activities at Sunset Center. The recreation commission also is expected to work closely with the private Carmel Foundation to help offer programs for the senior citizens of the area.

ANGELA FOLEY of Carmel smiles through the artwork she and fellow students created during the summer recreation program offered by the city and school district. According to a report, the city realized a net profit from the summer program. The council Sept.

2 will discuss two recreation-related activities — signing of a joint operating agreement with the youth center and creation of a recreation commission. (Michael Gardner photo.)

"We're pleased, we're just ecstatic," Recreation Committee Chairman Ken White said of the plan to formalize a commission.

White sees the commission as a complement rather than substitution for already-existing agencies.

The recreation commission also wants to ensure that the forestry and cultural commissions retain autonomy over Sunset Center and the parks.

"We're not interested at all in interfering...We have enough on our hands. We can see this is going to be a handful," he said.

The committee has not formally discussed goals, preferring to wait until it is granted commission status. However, White did discuss some of the activities he would like to see offered.

"THE FIRST order of business is to come up with a five-year plan once the commission is established and in cooperation with the new recreation director," he said.

"We're also going to try and mesh with the youth center," White continued.

One of the keys to success, he believes, is to find proper facilities. That is why cooperation with the school district, youth center, woman's club, Carmel Foundation and other private organizations is so important.

On the programming side, White said he would like to see an increased use at the Carmel Youth Center. Activities already filled or not offered by the Carmel Foundation and Sunset Center also should be added.

Some increased programs for the middle-aged and seniors; such as out-of-town trips for theater and concerts, also should be considered, he said.

For youngsters, White is concerned about the need for activities at the middle school. Many middle school students of working parents have little to do after class.

And that is why there has been an increase in the number of younger students hanging out at Carmel Beach, he said.

White did not specify any of the problems, but there are consistent reports of drinking, drug abuse and general rowdiness along Scenic Road and on the beach.

The recreation program could offer an alternative to Carmel Beach, White said.

Membership on the Carmel Recreation Commission will be determined when Mayor Clint Eastwood makes his appointments once the board is formally organized.

Under the proposed ordinance, the commission will have seven members serving four-year terms. Commissioners will have to be residents of Carmel "except in the event no resident with the required expertise can be found."

There also will be two ex-officio, or non-voting members — the city administrator and superintendent of schools.

The recreation commission will serve as an advisory agency to the city council, much like the forestry and cultural commissions.

New CHS music teacher is hired

A NEW band instructor has been hired for Carmel High School and that's music to the ears of many students and parents.

Richard Robins of Southern California, who was hired through the recruiting efforts of the Frohman Academy, will teach three periods of instrumental band at the high school beginning this fall.

Students interested in signing up for a course should contact their counselor.

The Carmel Unified School District Music Boosters has plans for a reception for Robins to be scheduled in mid-September.

The boosters is a club organized to support music programs throughout the district. For more information, contact Sharen Carey at 624-3652 or Kathy Nicholson at 624-5636.

Sunset School will open for the fall and winter term next Monday morning, Aug. 31. The full day's schedule will be followed Monday, according to Principal Otto W. Bardarson. Although there are many changes among the pupils each year, due to the roving habit of Carmel people, so that some familiar faces will doubtless be missing this fall, growth of the village since last year and the influx of kindergartners is expected to yield an increase in enrollment over last year.

NO FEDERAL AID FOR BOMB SHELTER SCHOOL BOARD TOLD

If Carmel School District includes a fallout shelter in plans for the new junior high school at the mouth of Carmel Valley, the shelter will have to be paid for out of local funds, as matters stand now.

In a preliminary report on Civil Defense for schools made by Mrs. Warren Edwards to the school board last night, trustees learned that no matching funds are available from any government agency for shelter-construction purposes.

Board members, who were advised that a three-hour interval is now necessary for delivery of all school children to their homes by bus, discussed the possibility of a dual-purpose shelter at the new school, in the form of an underground bus garage or, Clayton Neill suggested, underground classrooms.

RLS OPENS DOOR TO GIRLS

When the doors to Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach open this fall, a new sight will be seen on campus. For the first time since the school began in 1952, young women will be found among the students.

The administration of the school, working with the Board of Trustees, began studying the possibility of becoming co-educational a number of years ago. In May 1975, a report was submitted outlining the advantages of co-education. It was suggested that bringing women to the campus would result in broadening the academic curriculum and widening the points of view of students as a result of having worked and studied with members of the opposite sex.

In September, one year after the original report, approximately 50 young women will be present in the classes at Stevenson.

CV INTERSECTION CALLED "BOONDOGGLE"

Construction of a major intersection at Robinson Canyon Road and Carmel Valley Road could start as early as January.

The Board of Supervisors by a 3-0 vote approved a declaration of negative environmental impact for the intersection project at their Aug. 18 meeting. Completion of the underpass is crucial to further development of Carmel Valley Ranch, the largest development in the Valley's history.

If enough people express an interest in stopping the construction it will be halted until an environmental impact report can be prepared on growth-inducing aspects of the intersection. Alexander ("Zan") Henson, special counsel to the city of Carmel and opponent of the intersection, said he will be pleased to take the supervisors to court.

"The intersection is a boondoggle," Henson said after the supervisors acted. "It has been totally unplanned for. There is a real question whether a lawsuit should be filed to determine the growth-inducing aspects of the underpass."

Biking around the world

BRITISH BICYCLISTS Leon Unczer, left, and Robert Collins, center, both from Nottingham, have reached the 4,500-mile mark on their 15,000-mile trip around the world on bicycles. The two, who are raising money for cancer research while on the trip, stopped in Carmel for two days (staying at All Saints Episcopal Church) and managed to meet up with Mayor Clint Eastwood, who is well known for his contributions to charitable causes. "When we left we were sent off by two people even more famous than Clint Eastwood," they said. "Robin Hood and the Sheriff of Nottingham!" They left their hometown in April and intend to arrive back in Nottingham in August 1987. Carmel had been on the itinerary from the very beginning, they said. This was their first visit to the United States. Donations in their name can be sent to the American Cancer Society in Salinas. Grosvenor's Inn again asks for expansion approval

SAYING THERE will not be any exterior additions or remodeling, Grosvenor's Inn has asked that the Monterey County Board of Supervisors OK four new rooms.

Supervisors, who just recently turned down a similar request by Grosvenor's Inn, have agreed to hear the application again, scheduling a review for 2:15 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 2.

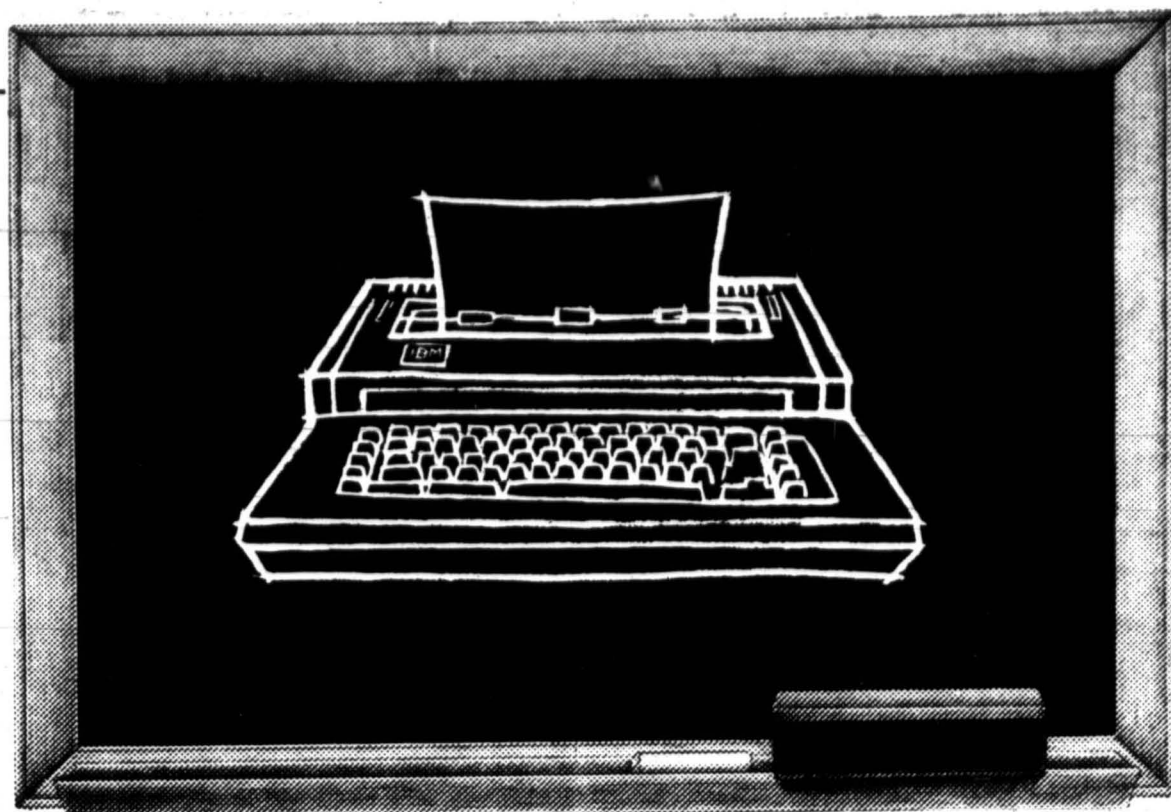

The increase is sought through a proposed amendment to the Carmel Area Land Use Plan.

According to Monterey County Planning Director Robert Slimmon, Grosvenor's Inn plans to increase its rooms from the present 11 by closing off connecting doors in the larger units.

Supervisors denied the application during a hearing not attended by the applicants, who claimed they had not been informed of the review, Slimmon said.

Denial was based on sentiments expressed by supervisors that there are enough hotels already in the land use plan planning area.

Supervisors meet in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Board of supervisors join in blocking tree removal

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors Tuesday afternoon agreed to join in a lawsuit seeking to block a Caltrans plan to cut five canopy trees as part of a road widening project on Highway 1 near Captain Cooper School in Big Sur.

But even before the board decision, Caltrans indicated that it will not cut the trees until an environmental impact statement (EIS), which requires public hearings, is prepared.

County Counsel Jose Ramos said supervisors basically joined the suit to ensure that an EIS is prepared and public hearings conducted.

"The county did know that there was going to be a road widening project, but the county didn't know five major trees would be cut or the action would be taken without an environmental impact statement or any public hearings," Ramos told the Pine Cone Wednesday morning.

A hearing was originally scheduled for Tuesday afternoon in Monterey County Superior Court to determine whether an in-

Child with AIDS teaches her a valuable lesson

By ILLIA THOMPSON

PERIODICALLY THROUGHOUT the school year I meet with a student who is unable to attend regular classes. One hour a day, I become the bridge between school and home. This day, as my supervisor speaks, there is an unusual tentativeness about her.

"We thought of you. You can take your time to make up your mind. Talk it over with your doctor first, if you like. A third-grader, a boy with AIDS, needs a home teacher."

Quiet for a moment, I then feel a wave of gratitude. "Of course, I'll do it. I'll be in tomorrow to pick up the supplies. We'll start as soon as possible."

As I enter the sprawling public school grounds, children, kindergarten through fifth-graders, dressed in early morning cleanliness, greet each other. Book bags swing. Brightly colored lunch boxes, filled with goodies from home, highlight the scene. Each child automatically walks toward his or her own classroom, desks welcoming, teacher prepared. A day full of social interaction as well as the quiet within which to learn. This carefully groomed school is no longer available to my student, a hemophiliac. The intrusion of the AIDS virus through a transfusion irrevocably alters and probably shortens his life.

Press coverage brings him into the spotlight. Parents threaten to withdraw their children, a teacher offers her resignation if this child enrolls in school. Fear of the unknown prevails. The school board, amid heated discussion, decrees that he may not attend their schools. His brother goes; he may not.

After meeting with his would-be teacher, I am given books and papers with which to attempt to duplicate the school experience.

The early morning on the quiet cul-de-sac welcomes me. Tract houses, closely aligned, each one much like the other, cozily spaced, individually tended. On the black tarred driveways, cars and trucks of assorted vintages rest between use. Round metal mailboxes on wooden posts, incongruous in this urban setting; some flags up, some down, and one at half-mast as though not quite sure. The year's early warmth pushes forth blossoming trees and flowers. Perpetual geraniums and daisies grow in potted profusion.

I arrive most schoolday mornings. We read, learn cursive, times tables, keep an ongoing journal, plant bulbs, work on art projects, take an occasional outing together and write letters. One of the first letters is a "thank you" for a shopping spree in a local toy store from "Make-A-Wish," an organization fulfilling the wishes of children with critical illnesses.

He is much weaker than he was a few months ago. Now a catheter into his heart delivers all his medication as well as his nourishment. His cough, obviously more painful, comes more frequently.

This morning as I walk up the driveway, I see him through the picture window. He is sitting on the couch looking at a bulky photograph album. As usual, I let myself in and sit down beside him. I read his journal. "My teacher didn't come yesterday. A real bummer!" I smile, telling him that I'm sorry that I missed a day, but I'm glad to be here now.

"Would you like to see my pictures?" He sits up straighter, nestling more comfortably into the couch cushions.

"Of course, I'd love to see them. Tell me about them."

He shows me his family pictures... camping trips, picnics, outings, holidays, all bound in the album covered in crisp white cotton material imprinted with small red flowers. He stops at a picture of last year's classmates.

"That's Rebecca. She died when she was eight. She was my best friend. The kids made fun of her because she had to shave her head."

"I bet you never laughed at her."

"No, I'd never do that."

"What do you think happens to people after they die?" I ask.

He answers, "Their souls go to heaven. There they wait for the resurrection to come back with perfect bodies to be with their families."

"So you mean that if someone has a broken leg in this life, he will be healed? If someone has bad eyesight, then he won't need glasses?"

"That's right."

"How wonderful that you know that."

"I'm eight now. I was baptized and all my sins were washed away."

"What happens if you make a mistake now? We all make mistakes sometime," I ask.

"If I make one and I'm righteously sorry, then I am forgiven. God forgives, you know."

He touches his catheter which is outlined by his T-shirt. Lessons continue, then end.

"I'm really tired now, but before you leave, I have something for you."

I watch him walk to the refrigerator, open the door and take out a large heart-shaped strawberry. As he places it in my hand, he says, "I hope you'll like it."

"I'll save it for my lunch. Thank you."

When I drive out of the cul-de-sac, I carefully taste the strawberry, my first of the season. Perfectly ripe, sweet, juicy; pure nourishment. This morning, he the teacher, I the student. Silently, I thank him for letting me into his world.

Supervisors join lawsuit to block tree cutting plan junction should be issued giving the trees a temporary reprieve.

However, the hearing was postponed at the request of Caltrans. A final hearing date had not been scheduled by press time, but it is expected to be set for either Sept. 3 or Sept. 10.

A preliminary injunction has been granted at the request of Big Sur residents, Rep. Leon Panetta and Assemblyman Eric Seastrand.

Caltrans proposes a $1 million resurfacing, widening and safety improvement project for a stretch of Highway 1 near Captain Cooper School.

As part of the federally-funded project, Caltrans would have to cut down three sycamores and two redwoods in a grove of trees that provide a canopy entrance to the Big Sur valley.

Margaret Owings, a Big Sur resident and wife of the late famed architect and conservationist Nathaniel Owings, organized a "save the trees" group to block the plan.

Panetta, Seastrand and Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman assisted in developing a compromise so that Caltrans would halt the road work when it reaches the trees.

from the contract," said Web Beckstead, deputy district director for project development and construction based in the San Luis Obispo Caltrans office.

Caltrans, which insists the trees pose a potential safety hazard, chose to undertake a complete environmental impact study (EIS) after the outcry from Big Sur residents, according to Beckstead.

Under federal law, an EIS must be prepared if there is significant public controversy over a project. When Caltrans obtained Coastal Commission approval for the road work and tree cutting, the agency said there was no public controversy.

Owings says Big Sur residents were not told of the plans until after approval was given by the Coastal Commission.

After learning of the project, Owings served as the lead petitioner in obtaining a temporary injunction blocking the tree cutting.

Although Panetta's compromise was greeted with appreciation, Owings said she plans to continue with the court case to try and block the tree cutting.

"All they did was say they would stop there. There was no promise to not cut the trees," stressed Owings.

Owings is happy that the Big Sur residents rallied to save the trees, at least for the temporary respite.

"If we had let this thing go, the trees would already be lying on the highway and they wouldn't think twice before doing it again," she said.

BUT THAT is only a temporary reprieve because Caltrans still plans to conduct an environmental assessment on the impacts and may cut the trees later, although it would not be part of this road work project.

"We'll just remove that (the tree cutting)

It's back to school time, CUSD classes begin Sept. 3

WAS IT really just 10 weeks ago?

Yes, summer is over and it's time to pack up the pencils and lunchboxes and trudge back to school for another nine months of homework, books and teacher's dirty looks.

Opening day in the Carmel Unified School District is Wednesday, Sept. 3.

Parents who have yet to register their students should contact the individual offices for information: Carmel High School, 624-1821; Carmel Valley High School, 624-4462; Carmel Middle School, 624-1821; Tularcitos Elementary School in Carmel Valley, 659-2276; River Elementary School in Carmel, 624-4609; and Captain Cooper School in Big Sur, 667-2452.

Parents should be notified soon that the district plans to continue its busing fee of $50 per year for the first two students; $25 for the third and free for the fourth youngster.

Information packets detailing busing information will be delivered by the student or through the mail. Those not receiving information and sign up forms by Monday, Sept. 8 should contact the students' school office.

At the high school, new Principal Marie Ishida will mail a packet home noting bus information, free lunch program details, a notice of legal risks and responsibilities, and an emergency card that must be signed and returned before the student is allowed to attend classes.

The packet also will note times for picking up class schedules, which begins at 7:30 a.m. opening day, Ishida said.

At the alternative Carmel Valley High School, parents of new students are welcome to attend an individual orientation, according to Principal Blake Fussenich.

In addition, there will be an open house at 7 p.m. Sept. 30 at the campus off Schulte Road in Carmel Valley.

Students who have not attended classes for a while and need a diploma to find a job especially are encouraged to register, Fussenich said. Carmel Valley High School offers flexible schedules and work-at-your-own pace programs.

At Tularcitos School, Principal James Kohnke said there are no special plans except to register incoming students.

At River School, the PTA plans an 8:30 a.m. coffee opening day to welcome new parents, according to new Principal Sharron Douglas.

At middle school, there is a new student orientation this morning, Thursday, Aug. 28. A Parent Faculty Club board meeting to talk about the new year is set for Friday, Aug. 29.

After-school sports will be offered at the middle school. Boys interested in soccer should contact Dick Zury and girls who want to play volleyball should see Trudy Davis.

The Frohman Academy also plans activities and later this month a scheule will be announced for acting classes.

Immunization shots needed by students to attend school

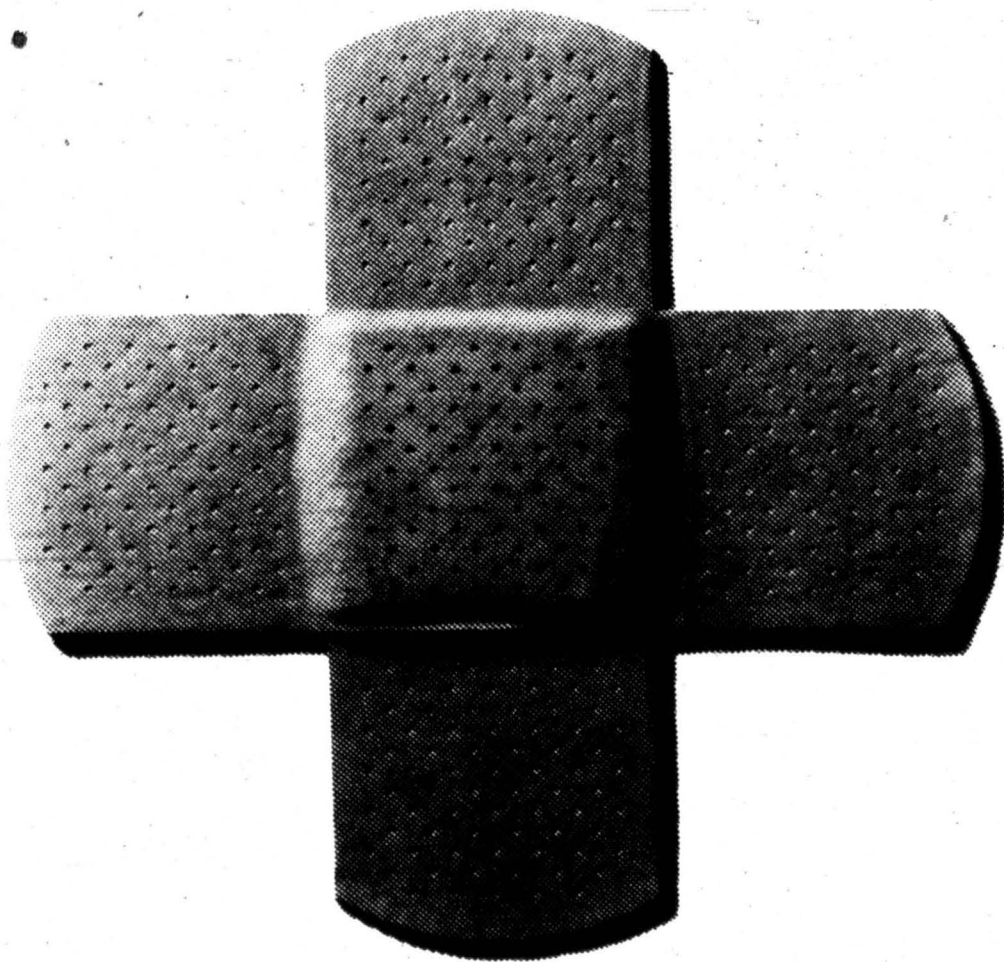

SOME STUDENTS in Monterey County may find themselves prohibited from attending school in September unless they get shots to meet state law.

According to Alma Wood, coordinator of the county Immunization Assistance Program, state immunization requirements have been tightened and schools in Monterey County have been strictly enforcing the laws for all students.

"Most kindergarten children will need at least four doses of polio, five doses of DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, and whooping cough), and one shot for measles, mumps, and rubella to be adequately protected against these diseases," Wood said.

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

The saving of Carmel

ONCE MORE there is looming ominously the nightmare possibility of a freeway in the steeply sloping and forested Hatton Canyon — an enormously costly freeway not only because of the many millions of tax dollars needed to build it but also because it could prove to be the open sesame yearning developers have long sought.

In the Aug. 14 Pine Cone, a letter writer, James B. Toy whose work takes him back and forth between Monterey and the Carmel Ranch and who has been timing his trips both ways at the different hours of the day, estimated the time saved at the busiest periods by a Hatton Canyon freeway could be as little as three minutes if existing Highway 1 between Ocean Avenue and the Carmel Valley Road intersections would just be four-lane where it is now only two lanes. Here's how he put it:

"Now I ask, is three minutes worth destroying the canyon and the life in it? Is it worth the outrageous multi-million dollar price tag? There is a good reason why the freeway ends where it does. There is another world, a more peaceful world, on the Carmel side of the hill . . . a slower, calmer way of life. A freeway would pierce that calm and tear it to shreds . . ."

That idea of Toy's — four-laning Highway 1 from Ocean Avenue to the Carmel Valley Road — is one of the alternatives described in the draft Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for what's called the Hatton Canyon Project. That draft EIS has now been completed by Gary Ruggerone in the Caltrans San Luis Obispo office and it has been forwarded to Caltrans headquarters in Sacramento and to the Federal Highway Administration for their review and for any suggested revisions.

Ruggerone says the Federal Highway Administration hasn't yet expressed its views (as I write this). But, after it does, the draft EIS will be amended to take into account the comments made and make required revisions. After the appropriate changes have been made, the completed EIS will be ready for circulation to city and county offices, civic organizations, the media, libraries, and to interested individuals.

This circulation period will be 30 days, and after that there will be another 15-day period during which written comments will be received. After this will come the public hearing (or hearings), and Gary Ruggerone said the auditorium at Carmel's Sunset Center, which seats some 750 people, would be a preferred location. The comments again would be taken into account.

At this point, a Project Development Team at Caltrans San Luis Obispo would go to work to sift and weigh all the input collected, and then out of it all would come the decision either to build a freeway in the Hatton Canyon or to make improvements along existing Highway 1.

AND WHEN is a decision likely to be made? Ruggerone says it is difficult to determine now just when such a decision would be made, but he ventures to say that it could be early in 1987.

And what would a Hatton Canyon Freeway cost? Ruggerone said that a 1985 estimate was close to $23 million. However there was word out of Sacramento late last year after a California Transportation Commission meeting held at Eureka that it could be — in 1989 dollars — as much as $29 million. And it is in early 1989 that construction would be expected to begin. Meanwhile the estimated cost of possible alternate improvements along Highway 1 would range from just under $3 million up to $8 million.

The alternate to which letter writer James Toy referred, and which I and many others have urged, is the adding of two lanes to the two already existing between the Ocean Avenue intersection and Carmel Valley Road and onward to Rio Road. The present estimated cost of this is a modest $3.1 million.

Here some readers may wonder why Caltrans has to wait for the Federal Highway Administration's views on the EIS and to take into account that agency's views and proposed EIS revisions before it proceeds, since state Highway 1 is not part of the interstate road network in California. Ruggerone said that it is out of a federal gas tax that most of the money would have to come to finance the construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway or any of the alternates along existing Highway 1.

Some time last year there was county concern about whether or not there would be federal money available after 1986 for a project such as a Hatton Canyon Freeway which wouldn't even get started until fiscal 1988-89. As I understood it, there was a new gas tax law enacted in 1982 which would come up for review some time this year, and there was some uncertainty as to whether or not it would be extended beyond 1986.

(Before starting to write this article, I phoned Rep. Leon Panetta's Monterey office to check the status of any federal tax law bearing on a possible Hatton Canyon project, but the answer wasn't immediately available.)

When Caltrans engineers were in the Carmel City Hall last May, Ken Jones, the engineer who would be charged with the task of designing a Hatton Canyon Freeway, said that it would take a year and a half of his time just to design such a project.

It would, of course, be my hope that there never would be any freeway in the sylvan Hatton Canyon. It also is my hope that there would continue to be an overwhelming concern about the speeding up of traffic.

Back in 1982 Caltrans and the then California Transportation Commission were about ready to terminate for good the idea of ever driving a freeway through the Hatton Canyon.

Back in February 1982 State Deputy Director John West of Caltrans said in a letter to the California Transportation Commission:

"It has been 26 years since the Hatton Canyon routing was adopted . . . There is no need for a high-capacity facility as envisioned by the adopted routing. There is no planned freeway development to the south and most traffic is of a local nature destined for Carmel and development along the Carmel Valley Road.

"The existing highway corridor offers potentially affordable improvement alternatives . . . The Hatton Canyon routing has been controversial throughout its lifetime . . . With this in mind, and considering the above, it is not realistic to continue to base planning on the eventual construction of the adopted routing . . . It is time to consider rescinding the adoption and start rethinking local development and transportation planning on the basis of living with the existing highway corridor."

IF YOU are newly come to this area, you might wonder why it was that this proposal to stop thinking about any Hatton Canyon Freeway did not end the local freeway idea.

The answer is, of course, that there was a statewide election late in 1982, and a new state administration came into office in 1983 — one which favored freeway building — and therefore revived the nearly dead Hatton Canyon project.

For 15 years I have had before local government committees in the state legislature what has been called the Norberg Plan for a Heritage City in Carmel and its environs both up the Carmel valley and down the coast. Most of those 15 years my plan has been on distant back burners, and once in 1978 it led to a 40-page report by a consultant to a local government committee of the state Assembly in Sacramento.

The consultant said that the Carmel area was no doubt unique and attractive in many ways but most of what I wanted to do could probably be achieved in some general way under existing laws. The consultant's report was addressed to Henry Mello who is now the state senator representing this part of the state. It had been because I could not find anything in existing state law which would do what I called "save Carmel for posterity" that I had conceived the Heritage City Plan.

Putting a freeway into the Hatton Canyon could have an adverse effect on the saving of Carmel — and all its tangible and intangible values — but the decision to stop it does not lie here, but in Sacramento. So far it has been possible to achieve delay because both locally and statewide there have been heroic efforts made at critical times by deeply concerned people to focus attention on the "saving of Carmel."

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

BY HENRIETTA STERN

Survival of the fittest — Part I

RECENTLY THE water management district was directed to prepare a federal Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) for the Army Corps of Engineers 404 permit.

This document will be combined with the state Environmental Impact Report (EIR) that the district had nearly completed. The most important aspect of the EIS is the requirement to evaluate in greater depth than is required for the EIR all feasible alternatives to the proposed San Clemente Project.

The key word here is "feasible," as not every alternative or combination of alternatives can meet the district's water supply, drought reserve and environmental goals. Our mission, then, is to determine which alternatives are indeed "feasible." This is no small feat, as more than 100 alternatives have been suggested in the past.

WATER RESOURCES CHAMPIONSHIPS

Think of the alternatives as 34 competitors in a "water resources championships." These 34 alternatives are finalists from previous studies performed by the district or other agencies over the past decade. The purpose of the championships is to "winnow out" the infeasible alternatives or combinations of alternatives by subjecting them to three successively stringent screening criteria that reflect district goals. Each screening will remove alternatives that do not meet the criteria until only those which are most likely to meet district water supply and environmental goals remain. These will be analyzed in detail in the EIS.

Our "contestants" range from dams on the Carmel River or its tributaries to wastewater reclamation or conservation. The first test is the primary screening, which is designed to remove those alternatives with obvious insurmountable problems, or with constraints that will take an "unreasonable" (as determined by the board) amount of time and money to mitigate.

Factors that are considered in the qualitative screening include jurisdictional, technical, timing and financial constraints.

Jurisdictional constraints entail unwillingness or inability, due to regulatory purview, of public agencies to grant the permits required to initiate or complete an alternative. It is assumed that any alternative may be met with political opposition and potential litigation; thus this factor is not considered as a screening criterion.

Technical constraints entail obvious geotechnical problems (e.g., seismic conditions), engineering problems, environmental problems such as disposal, untested technology and questionable availability of resources.

Timing constraints entail single projects that would not be complete by the date that the community reaches 95 percent of its total allocation. This date is presently estimated as the year 1995. This criterion is not meant to exclude a combination of projects that may be built over time.

Economic constraints entail projects that exceed "reasonable" costs (January 1986 value). "Reasonable" is defined as a project that will add no more than $100 per year to the average residential water bill (actual cost may vary). This corresponds to a maximum capital cost of $90,000,000, and a maximum annual cost of $11,500,000. In addition, the maximum cost of new municipal firm yield generated by a single project must not exceed $2,000 per acre-foot.

17 SURVIVORS... ON TO ROUND TWO!

Seventeen alternatives passed the primary screening on Aug. 20. They include (in no particular order): 20,000 ac.-ft. San Clemente Dam, 29,000 ac.-ft. San Clemente Dam (rollcrete), 29,000 ac.-ft. San Clemente Dam (rockfill), 45,000 ac.-ft. San Clemente Dam (joint use with Fort Ord and Marina), San Clemente Creek Dam, Cachagua Creek Dam, Chupines Creek Dam, Buckeye Creek Dam, Seaside Aquifer recharge (inland sites), Carmel Valley groundwater development, Seaside Basin groundwater development, dredging Los Padres Reservoir, excavating Los Padres Reservoir, dredging San Clemente Reservoir, excavating San Clemente Reservoir, wastewater reclamation for irrigation (CSD Treatment Plant) and a comprehensive water conservation program.

These 17 "survivors" will be more completely described by the computer simulation model developed by the district. Model output on yield, environmental enhancement and economics will be compared to more rigorous qualitative performance criteria. District staff will be drowning in numbers!

Results of the second screening will be presented at a workshop Oct. 9 at 7:30 p.m. in Carpenter Hall, Sunset Center, Carmel.

For more detailed information, readers are invited to peruse a recently completed draft working paper entitled "Evaluation of Alternatives," available at the district office.

Its purpose is to inform Pine Cone readers about district activities relating to the Carmel River and its environs. Exchange students seek hosts

Are you fascinated by other languages and cultures? By hosting a foreign exchange student, you can meet the world in your own home!

We are seeking families to host students from Brazil, Mexico, Japan, England, Spain, and Germany.

One of these boys or girls, individually selected for you, will live as a member of your family while he or she attends the local high school. These excellent students are very carefully screened, covered by medical insurance, and provide their own spending money. They are eager to experience our American way of life while sharing their culture, but they can only do so if you are willing to open your hearts and homes to them.

If you would like to participate in this unique learning experience, please contact international student exchange, P. O. Box 58, Fort Jones, California 96032 or 1-800-233-HOST or 1-916-468-2264 in California.

WATER BUSINESS

On this earth of ours, there is more water than anything else. Like the old sea god Proteus, water appears in many, wonderful shapes and forms, as oceans and rivers, as South Sea lagoons and in Hollywood swimming pools, as humid jungle vapors and frozen Arctic wastes, water is everywhere and, in every animate thing. Water supports the mysterious life force called protoplasm. You and I are ninety per cent water ourselves! Why a problem of water supply? Water has to be distributed — and it has to be the right kind of water for your special need, that is why Mother Nature alone is not a dependable supplier of water. That is why California - American Water Company is an indispensable agent in supplying you with water, the right kind of water. Cal-Am encourages their 34,000 customers to use water wisely and to ask questions about their water or service.

Brentano's arrives

BRENTANO'S BOOKSTORE has finally unpacked all of its books, videos and gifts at its new location in the lower level of Carmel Plaza.

Those that have been eagerly awaiting the bookstore opening will find the entrance no longer blocked as of Sept. 1, according to manager John Juster.

The store is a "prototype" Juster said, for the new look Waldenbooks is giving to its upscale subsidiary. Waldenbooks purchased the chain a couple of years ago after Brentano's went bankrupt.

"We'll carry all the general categories that all book stores carry, it just will have more of an emphasis on art and photography books," Juster explained. "Where we have cut back is in things like romance novels and children's books."

Those will be available, he added, it's just that the selection will not be as great as it is in their "mall-type" stores.

The gift department that was a major part of the pre-bankrupt Brentano's has been cut down significantly and the store will only offer a small selection. But that selection certainly has some interesting items, I must say.

Where else can you find a hand-held wine computer? Yes, now you can enter the wine you want and the little computer will tell you how drinkable it is and other little goodies I can't remember. If that isn't the ultimate "yuppie" adventure, I don't know what is. Sort of a portable wine steward. I wonder if it lists Ripple or Thunderbird?

There's another little computer available — a nutrition computer. I tried it but didn't have time to figure it out. Yes, it's in the running for the "ultimate yuppie" item, but I still feel the wine has a slight edge. Everyone eats food, but only the creme-de-la-creme are THAT concerned about their wine.

And did you see the word videos in the lead. Yes, Brentano's will be selling — not renting — videos of all kinds, including current and classic movies and how-to tapes. There also will be three video monitors running continually in the store.

A large magazine rack will also be featured in the store, Juster said, with selections from all over the world. The only one of its kind in Carmel, he claims.

Evening book store browsers can take heart. Brentano's plans on staying open until 9 p.m.

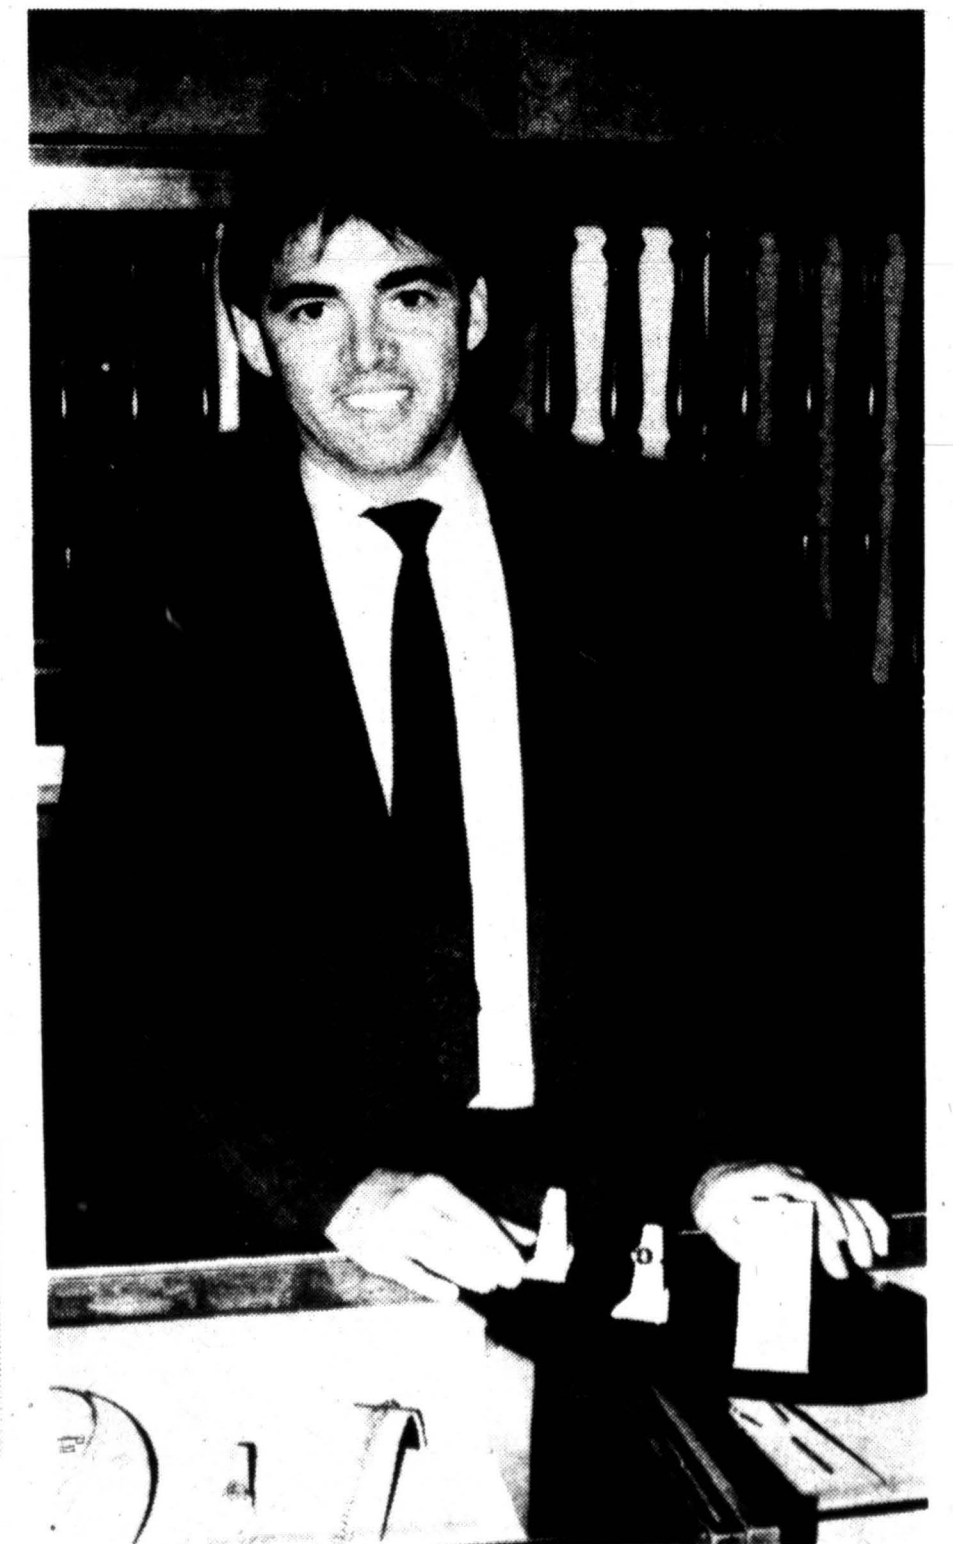

I have a challenge for browsers in the new store. Find the book with a male model on front who looks like former mayoral candidate Tim Grady. I did.

• Speaking of stores in the Carmel Plaza, the Carmel Planning Commission turned down Banana Republic's bid for a corrugated steel fake roof strip on its store location in the Plaza. Looks like they will have to reapply. The store is scheduled to open in December.

HENRI CORBAT/MARK AREIAS

Jeweler Mark Areias from Aptos has acquired Henri Corbat Jewelers on San Carlos near the corner of Fifth.

The full-service store was founded in 1963, Areias said, and offers everything from repair to appraising to custom design. It specializes in more traditional jewelry and has a strong following among the residents. Everything will remain the same, he added, even the name.

MARK AREIAS has just purchased Henri Corbat Jewelers on San Carlos near the Hog's Breath Inn.

BUSINESS BEAT

BY NANCY HILLS

Areias said he will be dividing his time between his store in Aptos, Mark Areias Jewelers, and the Carmel store. Sales manager Lori Ducoing, a certified gemologist appraiser, and Margaret Reade, who has been with the shop 13 years, will be assisting him in the Carmel operation.

Corbat had been very active in many community activities and charities around the peninsula and Areias said he plans to continue in that tradition.

WILLOW TEA ROOM

I understand when I mentioned that the Willow Tea Room reopened in last week's column, I forgot to mention where it is located. Consider it done. The restaurant/bar is in The Crossroads on the second floor next to the elevator.

If you haven't gone in to see this recreation of a turn-of-the-century tea room, you really should. Food's good, too.

PAUL LAUB AGAIN

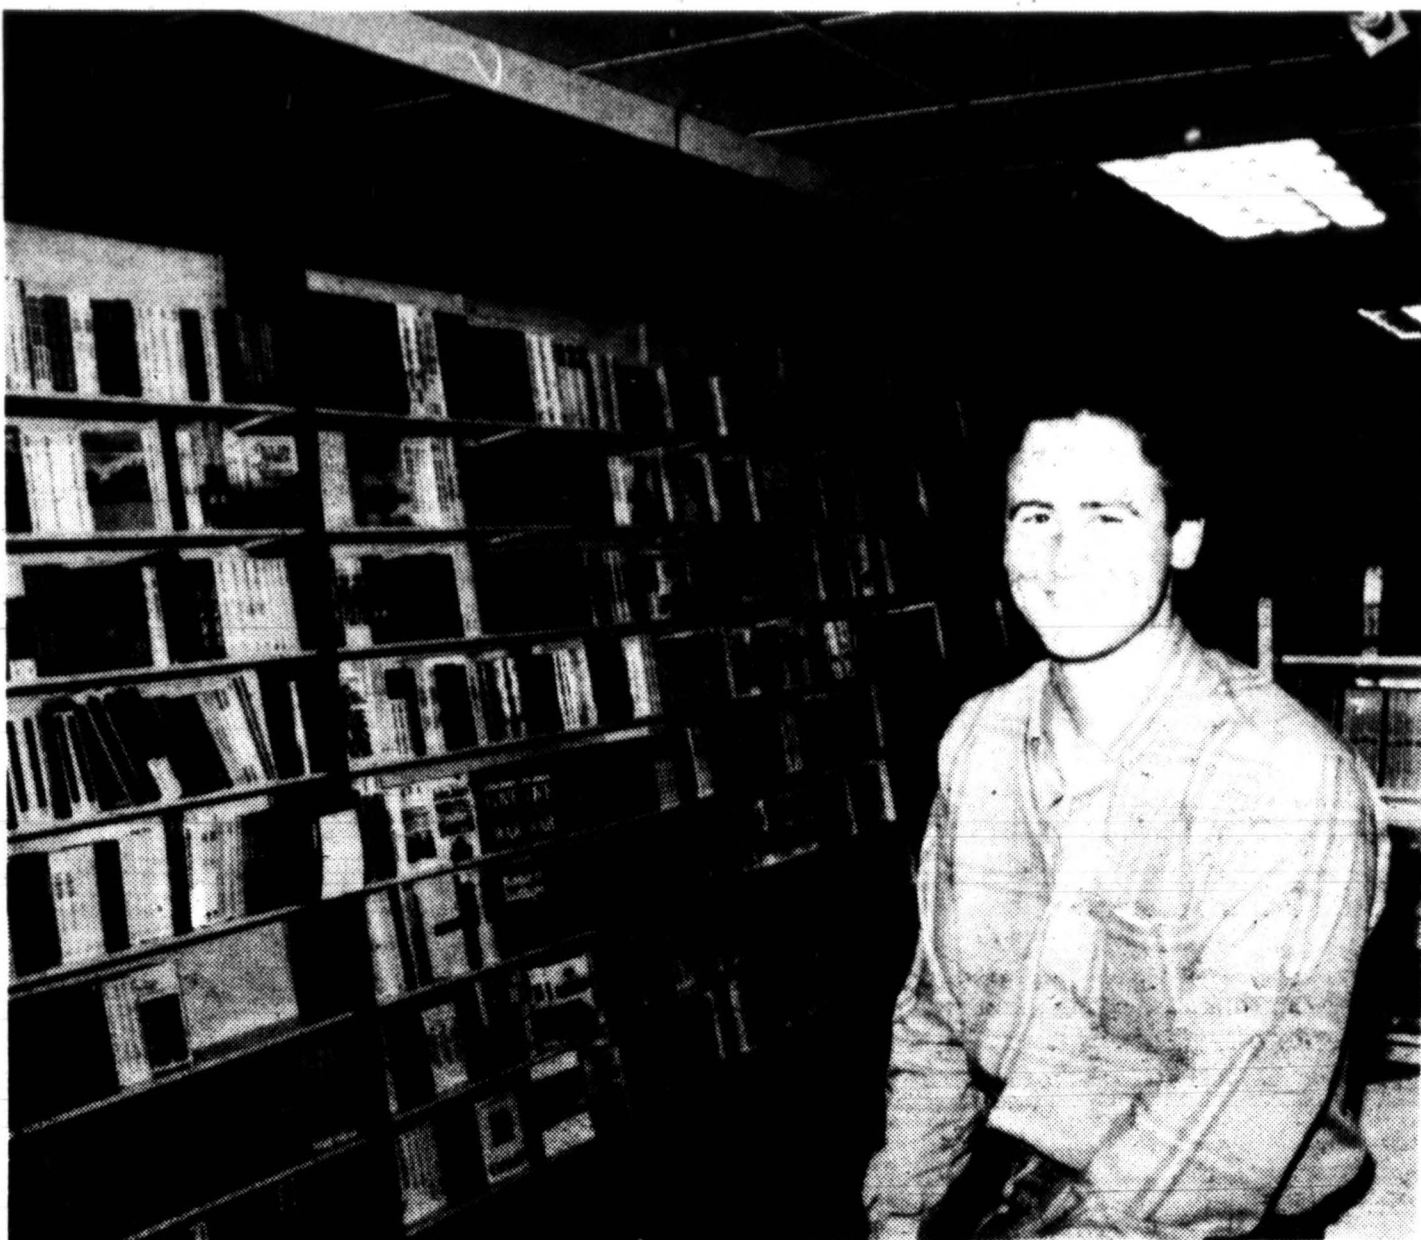

It seems the city is negotiating with Carmel entrepreneur and property owner Paul Laub about a business license. The city claims it cannot find a business license for Laub's business called Paradise in the Paradise Mall on the corner of Ocean and Dolores. I'm not real clear on what this Paradise business is, but most guesses are that it's Clintville, which is now located in the basement of the mall building and sells T-shirts.

Apparently, there was a license that expired in 1983 for Paradise (this is not the building, but a business in the building). Laub claims he has been paying taxes on the business through the Country Store — located on the corner of Ocean and San Carlos, but the city wants him to get a license for Paradise in the Paradise building.

Since it's pretty administrative, this could all be settled by the time this gets in print, but I did hear people are wondering what's going on.

Tax return help help available

A listing of sites providing free help to low-income, senior citizens, non-English speaking and handicapped taxpayers in preparing their tax returns will be available at Assemblyman Sam Farr's Monterey district office.

Taxpayers needing help in preparing their Homeowners, Rental Assistance, Property Tax Postponement claims and Rental Credit returns will be available.

To obtain the name, address and phone number of the nearest site, contact Doris Jones or Laure Dillion at Farr's Monterey District office, 1200 Agujito Road, or call 646-1980.

The filing period has been extended through Sept. 2.

Students need host families

You can make the difference by opening your heart and home to a 15- to 18-year-old teenage student from another country who is eager to study at your local high school and learn about the American culture and life — about your life.

You need only to provide room and board and a generous portion of tender loving care either for a school semester or a school year. The student will already have his or her own spending money, and insurances will be sufficiently covered.

What do you benefit from this? Well, not only are you able to claim a $50 tax deduction for each month you host the student, but you will cultivate a lifelong friendship.

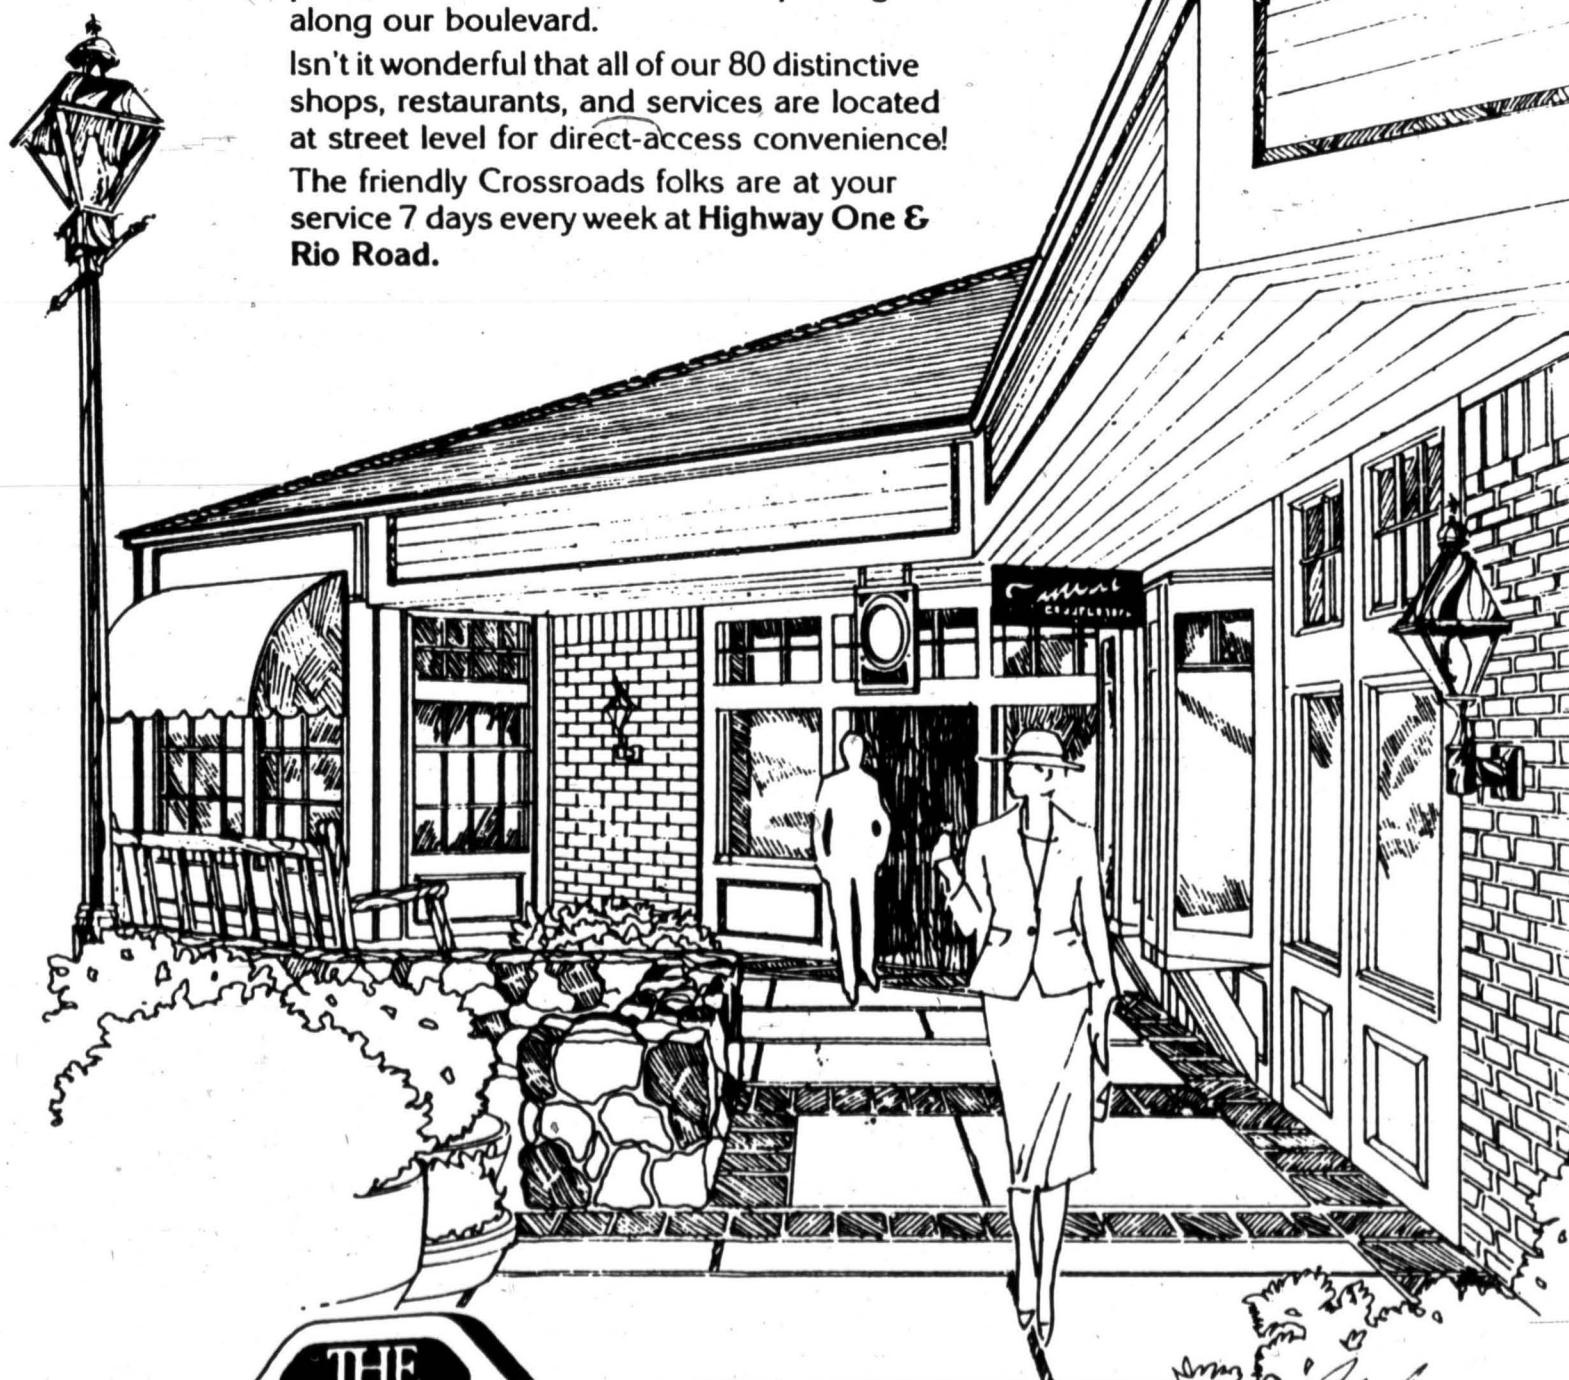

You will be able to say that you responsibly played a big part in another individual's cultural experience. You will feel proud that you made that difference. Say YES today!

Contact: YES-Youth Exchange Service, 350 South Figueroa St., Suite 257-P, Los Angeles, CA 90071, or call 1-800-533-0656.

Locals shine at Concours

IT WAS a matter of local boys making good at the 36th Annual Concours d'Elegance Sunday afternoon as Pebble Beach residents Craig McFarland and Windom Estes took home special trophies.

Dedicated this year to the fine motor car Mercedes-Benz, the Concours featured numerous entries ranging from a 1902 Mercedes Roadster to a 1937 540K Special Roadster.

Appropriately, the Best of Show winner went to a Mercedes, a 1938 Mercedes-Benz 540K Special owned by Arturo Keller of Mexico City.

Non-Mercedes cars also drew admiring crowds. There were American Underslung, Duesenbergs, Rolls-Royce, Ferraris, Auburns and Cadillacs.

Locals fared well this year, with McFarland's Mercedes and Estes' MG.

McFarland's 1956 Mercedes 300 SC Cabriolet was entered as part of a special competition also honoring the 25th anniversary of the Gull Wing Group International and 20th anniversary of the Mercedes-Benz Club of America.

The motor car, one of only 46 of that type produced, won best in its class and was selected to exhibit at the Concours on the upper lawn in front of The Lodge.

The 300SC Cabriolet, formally owned by the Belgium royal family, was restored by Charles Brahm, owner of Mercedes Obsolete in Huntington Beach. Brahm restored three of the five Mercedes selected for that special exhibition.

Windom Estes has special reason to be proud of his award. Estes personally restored his 1932 MG J2 Roadster that won best in its class.

WM. MOORE NAMED SCOUTING DIRECTOR

William N. Moore, peninsula district executive for Scouting, was commissioned by the National Executive Institute in Arlington, Texas on Aug. 14 to professionally serve the peninsula in its Scouting needs.

As district executive for the Monterey Bay area, Moore is responsible for working with the community to maintain and advance the Scouting program on the peninsula.

For further information regarding the Boy Scouts, Moore can be reached at the Boy Scouts Center at 372-8238.

ANTIQUE SALE TO BENEFIT HOSPICE OF THE MONTEREY PENINSULA

The First Annual Antique Show and Sale to benefit Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula will be held Thursday-Saturday, Aug. 28-30, at the San Carlos Cathedral Hall, Church Street, in Monterey.

Hours for Thursday and Friday will be 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

California antique dealers will exhibit merchandise specially gathered for this event. Visitors to the show will find unusual items of estate jewelry, silver and crystal, fine linens and porcelains.

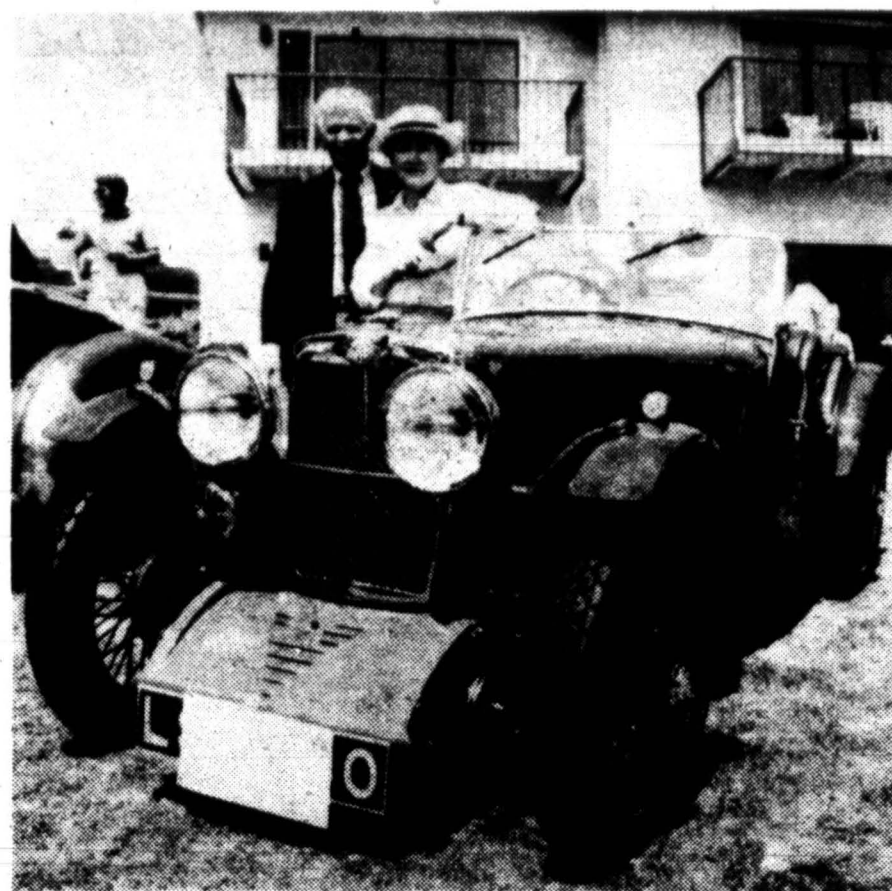

Specialists in rare prints, California paintings and fine books are expected, as well as purveyors of goods from the Orient.

Country furnishings will be found in French, English and Early American styles.

Luncheon will be available daily from noon to 2 p.m., served by the Italian Catholic Federation. A beverage bar will be operated by the Knights of Columbus during those hours. The admission donation of $2.50 is tax deductible.

For more information call 372-6565.

SPINAL COLUMN

(Advertisement)

DON'T IGNORE THE WHIPLASH

Whiplash type neck injuries occur as a result of a sudden backward and forward movement of the neck. Such injuries frequently occur in front-to-rear auto-collisions.

A sudden forceful whipping movement of the neck serves to stretch or sprain the ligaments and muscles which hold the spinal segments or vertebrae within the normal range of movements.

Failure of the holding ligaments to limit the range of movement of a vertebrae allows it to slip into an abnormal position or beyond its normal range of movement. When this occurs, the tiny nerve openings located between the adjacent vertebrae are partially closed and distorted in shape. The abnormal nerve opening serves to compress and irritate the spinal nerve which exists in the spinal cord through the opening. The result of compression and irritation of a spinal nerve is pain and/or loss of function in those structures of the face, neck, shoulders, arms, chest, and back that are supplied by the injured nerve in the neck.

The complexity of a whiplash-type spinal injury which includes ligament muscle damage, disturbed spinal mechanics and spinal joint and nerve injury understandably causes a wide variety of symptoms.

Symptoms of neck, arm, chest, and back pain with headache and dizziness might develop within a few hours following the injury. Frequently, however, a few symptoms don't develop until weeks or months, after the accident. Late symptoms often develop as the result of a spinal disc and joint degeneration caused by the stress of altered spinal mechanics. As the disc and joint gradually degenerate, the nerve opening is gradually closed. Finally, the spinal nerve is compressed and irritated. Essentially, the same symptoms develop that are experienced in the acute phase of the condition — headache, dizziness, shoulder, neck and arm pain. Chiropractic care assures maximum spinal correction following whiplash-type injuries.

SYMPTOMS OF WHIPLASH

Medical research now links the symptoms listed below with whiplash injuries. While one or more of the symptoms can occur immediately, others may not develop until hours, weeks or even months following the injury. If you are involved in an accident don't take chances with self-diagnosis. Contact this office as quickly as possible. We are specialists in structural and spinal disorders and will advise you frankly, sincerely, and honestly.

UNITED WAY FUND-RAISING KICK-OFF DINNER

The Salinas Valley United Way will be holding its annual fund-raising dinner from 3-9 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 28 at the Posse Grounds in Salinas. The event will feature a steak dinner, two dance bands, a dunk tank featuring local celebrities, and a cheerleader cheer-off. The United Way funds 27 local charity organizations, including Meals on Wheels and the Salvation Army. For more information call 424-7644 or 384-7888.

A SALUTE to Mercedes was the theme of this year's annual Concours d'Elegance in Pebble Beach as thousands of fine automobile buffs enjoyed a historic exhibit of what many to believe the finest line of motor cars ever produced. Above in the foreground is a replica of the first gasoline-powered car, a three-wheeler driven at a top speed of 9 1/2 miles per hour on the streets of Mannheim, Germany by inventor Karl Benz on July 3, 1886. In the background is the first four-wheeled gasoline-powered motor car from Gottlieb Daimler, who later joined with Benz to form the Daimler-Benz A.G. company in 1926.

VENTANA WILDERNESS REPORT

BY GLENN R.
STEWART

A place for eagles

THERE IS a place for eagles in Big Sur. After several years of looking forward to the return of the bald eagle to the Central Coast, the dream has become reality.

That realization was brought home in no uncertain terms when I came upon our first released eagle perched upon a ridge recently. It was sunset and we were hoping to locate the bird with radio telemetry equipment and get a visual on her before dark. The signal was strong, indicating that she was close by.

Our last sighting had been during midday as she soared above the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary release site in Anderson Canyon. Bald eagles have a distinctive soar. It is different from red-tailed hawks, vultures and golden eagles. They seem to "float" in an extremely buoyant manner. A 7-foot wingspan reaches into the thermals and the big bird seems to be effortlessly sucked into the heavens.

The warm upward currents had subsided with the evening and we crept down the rutted Coast Ridge Road in a four-wheel drive. Suddenly, my bald eagle search image echoed back to me with an unforgettable visage. Our eagle stood like a relaxed and confident statue atop the 20-foot stump of an old ponderosa pine. One big foot was tucked up under its feathers. Her tail lay against the trunk and her head was turned casually in our direction as she watched the 4 x 4 creep past.

She was well off the seldom-travelled road and blended into her surroundings. The casual observer might well have completely missed her. Like a mountain lion or bobcat sighting, seeing this eagle was a rare gift. She belonged there. Bald eagles are an historic part of the Big Sur scenery, and I believe that it was on that day of soaring and ridgetop perching that our awkward young bird made the transition from a dependent, newly introduced fledgling, to a confident member of the Big Sur community.

The well-preserved and relatively pristine condition of the Monterey/San Luis Obispo County coastline is a primary reason that the state and federal wildlife regulatory agencies permitted Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary the privilege of initiating this effort to restore a population of bald eagles to the area. Local groups and individuals have played an important role in maintaining the integrity of our unique coastal wilderness. The recent effort aimed at providing more sweeping federal jurisdiction over the wilderness has met with local dissent.

THE LEGACY OF JAMES WATT

To many, the haunting memory of the James Watt era is still to fresh. Under Watt, discretionary powers were implemented widely to favor the development and sale of parcels of federally owned wild lands. Watt "changed the rules" governing the qualification of federal land for wilderness status that eliminated many pristine parcels from consideration. To his credit, Watt is said to have been responsible for mobilizing a large contingent of previously uninvolved Americans into active supporters of our "Natural Heritage."

Watt clearly does not represent the norm and we like to think of our Secretary of Interior as a champion of our natural national treasures. A reckoning of his behavior, nevertheless, is clearly sufficient to cause a local knee-jerk reaction to the thought of a "federalized" Big Sur.

The commitment of the Central Coast to be the author of its environmental quality is a factor that bodes well for the future of bald eagles here. That strength of resolve is backed by a hundred years of continuous preservation. The feds on the other hand have recently faltered and stumbled in this regard. The impacts are permanent so the community is well advised to scrutinize the federal initiative and provide input to the process as it has been through Congressman Leon Panetta.

SIGHTINGS OF BANDED EAGLES

Our bald eagle is out exploring and we have had some marathon days keeping up with her. We call her Miss O'Brien. Sightings of banded bald eagles in Big Sur will be greatly appreciated this fall so keep an eye out. Our bird is of course immature and is not quite so obvious without the characteristic white head and tail feathers that they acquire after a few years.

We will continue our bald eagle releases for a minimum of five years and I expect that we will serve as foster parents for between 40 and 50 eaglets in order to reestablish the species to our coastline. With your help and continued protection of the area, Big Sur will truly be "a place for eagles" with bald eagle nests overlooking the Pacific from the top of redwoods for the first time since 1933.

(Editor's Note: The Ventana Wilderness Report, written by Glenn R. Stewart, executive director of the Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary, will appear in the Pine Cone every fourth Thursday of the month. For more information or for comments or questions, contact the Sanctuary at 429-2466 or P.O. Box 894, Carmel Valley, Calif. 93924.)

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

Two big bashes

THERE WERE two big celebrations in Carmel the past week. Copies-by-the-Sea held a first anniversary celebration with a party at their location on Dolores Street in the Del Dono Court and three city officials attended the party in addition to many locals who patronize this establishment.

Among those in attendance were: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hicks, Dick Scofield (whose office is above Copies-by-the-Sea), Bob Fischer, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Holbin, Michael Bowen, Richard Barratt, Mignor Shalagard, Karie and Ron Parravano, John Kefauver, Sue Hutchinson, "Maxine," and Barney and Eleanor Laiolo, just to name a few. Tasty delights and champagne were the highlight of the party.

Over at the other part of town next to Security Pacific Bank on Seventh Avenue between Mission and San Carlos, Beeches' Gallery held their Silver Anniversary Celebration and this was a "biggie," with a 25th Anniversary ice carving and the party catered by the Fifth Avenue Deli.

While there we had an opportunity to chat with Alexei Korotuykov, author and artist whose book, It's Hard to Be a Russian Spy, has been published by Simon & Schuster. He's an interesting chap and he'll cook a Russian dinner if I reciprocate with an Italian dinner. I think he's got a deal!

Those in attendance, and there were more than we can mention, included: Kay Rodgers, Patricia and Scott Vance, Ken and Dolores Hansen, Sue Kelley, Lou and Shirley Rosen, artists Marjorie Colus and Des Mathews, Gus and Frances Ariola (Gus' works are seen at gallery), and Kelly McDermott, who is not only attractive, but believe it or not, is a commercial pilot working out of Salinas for "Air Trails." She can fly me anywhere!

LET'S GET AWAY FROM IT ALL

Took a three-day respite to get away from the crowds and the fog and cool air and journeyed to Morro Bay and the San Luis Obispo area where the weather was great and so were the golf courses. In Morro Bay I stayed at the Blue Sail Inn with a direct view of The Rock and bay; the feature being a Jacuzzi spa which is available for all those who stay at the Inn. The "in" restaurant there is Dorn's, the original breakers cafe where we sampled halibut on the luncheon menu (which begins at 11 a.m.).

The Morro Bay golf course is a championship layout, but it gets too much play and my 18 holes was reduced to only nine because of the traffic on the course. Rumor has it that the course is up for lease. Good investment for someone. My next stop was the San Luis Bay Inn for breakfast and then a round of golf on the Avila Beach course, adjacent to the hotel. The front nine is kind of hilly but a true test of golf. The back nine is kind of "funky" with a couple of bridge crossings that tend to be a little on the dangerous side because the bridges are made of wood and have had "mucho" traffic on them. Ken Miller, former peninsula resident, works at the golf course a couple days a week while attending Cal Poly to get his degree in agronomy.

On the way south, stopped in Atascadero where they have a sporty course called Chalk Mountain. Give that one a try, you'll like it ... the greens are excellent and the course a good test. Be sure you take an electric cart because it's too hilly to walk.

HERE AND THERE

Desert folk getting out of the heat of Palm Springs (it's been around 110 degrees there) to come to Carmel include Mr. and Mrs. Nick Romano (they've been here since the first of August) from Indian Wells, Lee Busby ("Buz," as we call him), who works for Landmark in Palm Desert at Millions Hills, and Bobby Harris (formerly from Carmel) who is delving in real estate there.

TRAFFIC DOLDRUMS

Where are the city fathers (and mothers) who turned down the Hatton Canyon Freeway project some 18 years ago? For those who have left this mortal coil, they're probably turning over in their graves when they witness the traffic on Highway 1 and Rio Road, right up to the traffic light at Carmel High, going back to the Highlands Inn.

At this time of the year, figure on a 10-minute delay, just trying to cross the highway from the Crossroads to Rio Road, particularly between 4 and 6 p.m. each day. This area is too small to handle the kind of traffic (both cars and humans) that we've experienced this summer. We all came here (I presume) to rid ourselves of the smog, traffic, hustle and bustle to live a more subdued life, but it appears now that we are right back where we started. Can we remedy this problem?

I'm off my soap box for another week. Later!

ROUNDUP

Well baby, child health clinic set

The Monterey County Health Department will present a second well baby clinic this month.

A clinic will be offered Thursday, Aug. 28 at the Monterey office, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey. For an appointment, call 899-4271.

Public health nurses examine and test the child, provide immunizations and counsel about correct feeding and nutrition, growth and development and dealing with the child's behavior patterns. The clinic also provides school physicals.

Clinic fees are set by sliding scale, based on ability to pay. The maximum fee is $20.

Back to school blues

BEFORE YOU buy that last pad of notebook paper, before you play that last game of Galaxians, before your croakies give out, skate, run or cycle over to the Carmel Youth Center for our Mystery Movie Nite.

Mystery Movie Nite starts 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Aug. 30, and is a chilling double feature. Our first is Repulsion. This '60s thriller stars Catherine Deneuve. The story is about a lovely young woman left alone in a London flat — and turns into a topnotch psychological thriller.

Our second film is Obsession, one of Brian dePalma's first films. The story is about a man racked by guilt that turns into paranoia. A classic in the Hitchcock tradition.

Our snack bar will be open and serving the best hot dogs on the planet with all the free popcorn you can eat. Remember, admission is free to all members.

Some of you may have heard the rumors around town about a new weight room and workout facility at the youth center. Well, it's true. Mayor Clint Eastwood has offered to build a new facility here. All I can tell you is that the plans are on the drawing board.

Before that's done you may want to stop by on Thursday Aug. 28 from 12-3 p.m. for our "Hamburg Porkout." Make your own burger — as little or large as you like. Put it together with a $2 price tag — you have the best deal in town.

Last — I would like to welcome Dave Rich, our new snack bar chef. Dave comes to us from Tulsa, Okla., and will be a familiar face here. Remember, we have the cure for those back to school blues.

Christian preschool taking applications

Carmel Valley Community Chapel Christian Preschool is accepting applications for the 1986-87 school year.

School begins Monday, Sept. 8, 9 to 11:45 a.m.

The program consists of a variety of activities designed to help children grow spiritually, socially, intellectually and emotionally, including stories, arts and crafts, music and dance, coordination games and academic subjects.

Tuition is $95 for five days a week, $80 for three days a week.

For more information, contact Carmel Valley Community Church, 659-2278, or Linda Ingram, 659-3030.

C.V. chapel thrift shop now open

The Carmel Valley Community Chapel, 42 Village Drive, Carmel Valley, has reopened its newly renovated Thrift Shop and is ready for business on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Customers are urged to come and see the many back-to-school clothes at bargain prices, as well as household items, toys, flower bulbs, cookbooks, fabric, linens and much more.

The Thrift Shop provides a substantial source of revenue for the Chapel's programs and community service projects. Donations of clean, wearable clothing and salable goods are needed and may be delivered during Thrift Shop hours. Mattresses or junk is not acceptable.

For more information, call the Chapel office at 659-2278 on the mornings of Tuesday through Friday.

The Golden Years

Do you know an older person who has lost his or her sight? The American Foundation for the Blind provides these suggestions for people who act as guides or escorts for the sightless: let a blind person take your arm, rather than taking his, and don't try to steer the person; let the blind person walk a half step behind you, giving him time to respond to your cues; when approaching steps, tell the person and indicate whether they go up or down; avoid low branches or other hanging objects. For more information about assisting blind people, write to the American Foundation at Box 111, New York, NY 10011.

 With Alzheimer's disease the fourth leading cause of death among older Americans, government agencies are beginning to respond to this terrible problem. Last year the state of California passed two measures to help deal with Alzheimer's. One appropriates $1 million to colleges with medical programs to set up diagnostic and treatment centers for the disease. The other provides funds for the establishment of special day-care centers for persons with Alzheimer's.

Tor House offers quiet trip into times past

By SHAWN EVANS

RISING IN the early morning sun, Hawk Tower stretches and winks to a few passersby. In a crowded residential section of Carmel, it goes relatively unnoticed.

Inside the grounds, many varieties of flowers open to color a new day. The smell of the ocean is in the air. There is rock; everywhere there is rock — in the small dividing walls, along the pathway, mortared and molded to form the frame of the buildings.

ARTS & LEISURE

This is Tor House, the house that Robinson Jeffers, famous Carmel poet and playwright, built 67 years ago.

Inside, the volunteer tour docent, Mary Jane Dziedzic, carefully points to a picture. "This is 1914. As you can see, it is very desolate."

Unlike today, this picture of Carmel holds no paved streets and no buildings made from wood or brick — just the sprawling countryside dotted with shrubs, and open ocean.

Dziedzic's hand motions to another photograph, this one of Robinson Jeffers accepting an award in front of Tor House from Occidental College.

"Robinson Jeffers didn't like awards," she explains, noting that he rarely accepted them. "He felt they detracted from the writer."

"The house was finished in 1919," Dziedzic continues, leading our group of two outside toward the main house. She stops by the gate and points to a stone wall. "Friends would gather rock and bring it back. Here's a piece from the Temple of Heaven in Peking — and some lava from Hawaii. There's also a piece from the Great Wall."

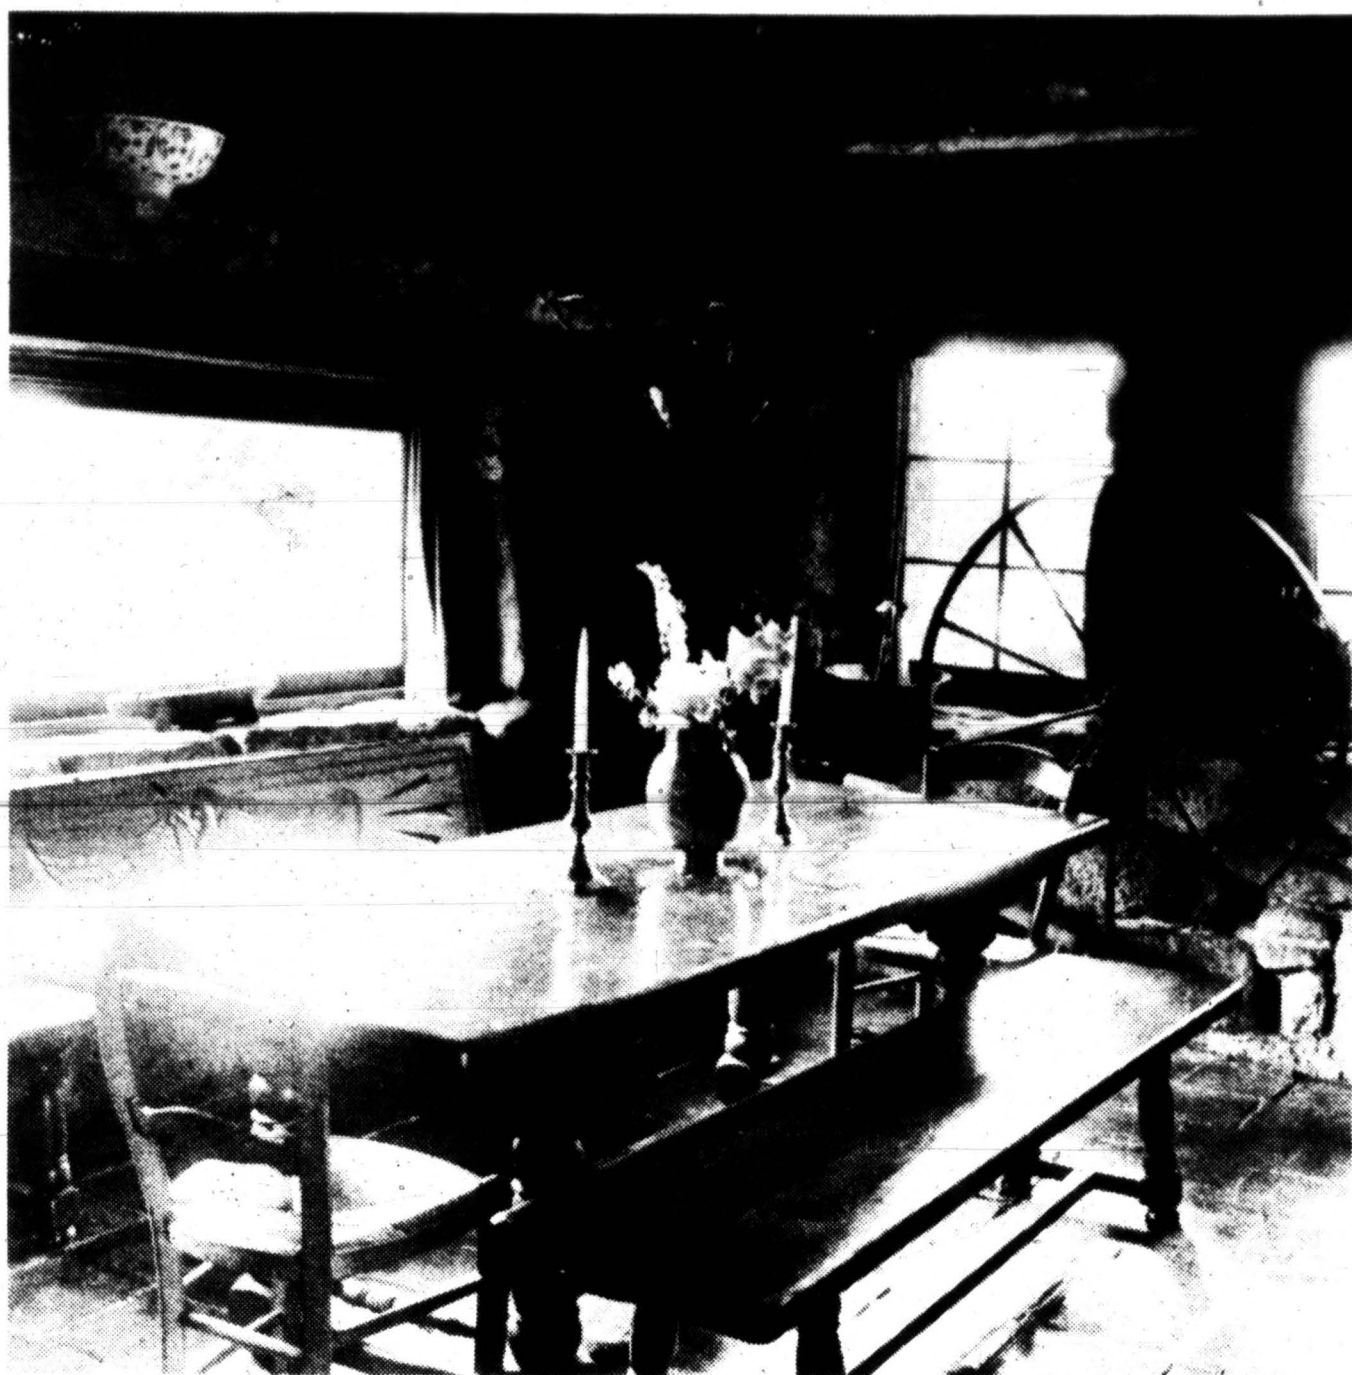

Passing through a small gate, Dziedzic explains that Jeffers was very conservation-minded. "He used a slate from a pool table in the walk." With a sweeping gesture of her arm, she indicates a flat slab of stone set off the ground and adds, "This bench was made from the ballast of a ship."

The path to the main house leads onward, nothing but a trail of stone and flowers to the door.

BACK IN the Tor House Foundation office, Nancy Miller, executive president, gives a little more insight into Carmel's most famous literary figure.

"Robin and Una had decided to live in England or Ireland," Miller explains. When they traveled to Carmel, "They came and saw the Carmel Point area — there was nothing down there except the monastery . . . and they finally decided that that was where they really wanted to be."

"They had a house on Second and Monte Verde," Miller continues, "and Robinson

THE YEAR could be 1919 as the early morning sun shines into the dining room at the Tor House in Carmel. Very little has changed at this well-preserved historical mansion. Guided tours are offered daily.

THE INSIDE of Tor House remains much as it did when Robinson Jeffers lived there. One can almost feel the warmth of the cozy room with its rugs, wooden furniture and fireplace. (Holly McFarland photo)

THE PATH which leads to the 67-year-old Tor House demonstrates the tranquility of the scene. Nothing but a trail of stone and lush flowers dot the entrance to the historic home, which was built by Carmel poet Robinson Jeffers. (Holly McFarland photo)

Jeffers apprenticed himself to a stone mason who taught him how to make the mortar, how to put the stones together. He and the stone mason worked together for three months . . . after three months Robinson Jeffers kept working on the house until finally it was habitable and they could move in."

"He was a conservationist at heart," Miller acknowledges. "He planted 1,400 trees in the area . . . Monterey cypress, Monterey pine, and eucalyptus."

Jeffers was very concerned with his house and how it was made, so the Tor House Foundation maintains the property as it was, Miller explains, noting that it is on the "National Trust for Historic Preservation."

"I would like more people to come and see Tor House," she says in earnest, explaining that once people come to the house they can't stay away.

Every year there is a garden party in May, a time that most people first see Tor House, Miller says.

"The first time they show up is to the garden party, which is a very festive, very obvious party. And they all say 'Oh, I've always intended to come, but I never have.'"

"And once they come, they're hooked. They come again, they bring friends, they send friends. They end up being very supportive."

There is another event sponsored by Tor House Foundation. "We have seminars," Miller says. "They're open to the public. It's always in October."

"We do not have celebrities in the sense of movie stars and that kind of thing. We do have literary types that come — people who are interested in Jeffers; they're from all over the world: Japan, Scandinavia, Spain — we have a complete polyglot of people."

She continues. "Jeffers' 100th anniversary of his birth will be next year. There's going to be a very large celebration throughout the year — everywhere — Pittsburgh. Jeffers graduated from Occidental. There's a big celebration going on there."

"We have all kinds of plans going: there's going to be a four-volume complete edition (referred to as 'the complete works') of Robinson Jeffers. The first volume will hopefully be out in early 1987." Many of his books are out of print, Miller added.

THE INSIDE of Jeffers' home exudes a rustic quality. Old rugs cover the floor, bookcases crammed tightly full lean from walls, pictures hang in odd silence.

"Una wrote from a captain's desk," Dziedzic explains, leading us past the small piece of furniture and through the old kitchen now full of books.

"The house has well-planned views," she says, motioning us to sit down at the dinner table and admire the view. The window is rectangular, giving a long view of the sea and its coast.

In a different section of the room, a corner away from the sea, Dziedzic shows us where Jeffers tended his fires. Upon digging the pit he discovered evidence that previous occupants had used this area. "It really pleased him that he picked the same place as the Indians for his fireplace."

Letting us lag around the room for a little while longer, Dziedzic walks us outside and around the building. She points to a tiny rectangular window. "He added a windshield from a car for the boys."

Past the huge garden of flowers, the small path winds its way to Hawk Tower. A large object sits just off the path. "There's a motto from Shakespeare on the sundial," she says, pausing just long enough for the words to sink in. "Life is but a shadow."

Hawk Tower stands before us now, tall and thick, a huge column of stone. Inside, the tower holds a few surprises. One is a small sunken room off to the left that Dziedzic explains is "the dungeon."

She opens a hidden door in another part of the room and reveals a stone staircase leading up. "Lead with your left shoulder," she says, smiling as I disappear into the wall.

It is a tight fit. Dziedzic explains that Jeffers built it especially for his two sons, Donnan and Garth. That is soon apparent. The walls seem to get skinnier on the way up, perfectly navigable for two small, adventurous youngsters.

Halfway up there is a window. A window in a secret passage! The view looks out upon the main house. A small gargoyle the size of a fist grins in silence.

Dziedzic unlatches the catch upstairs and opens the other secret door, a simple wooden panel. Leading us to the very top she points out two old portholes, set side by side. "One is from the Natalia," she mentions, "the ship Napoleon rode on."

The last flight up to the tower is a stiff one. A sturdy, yet rusted chain is the only support on the journey up. "Have a seat," Dziedzic offers, motioning toward a spot built by Jeffers for just such an occasion.

Looking down at the white slab of stone at my feet, Dziedzic tells me about another piece of material Jeffers has used in his house. "This marble is from a bank in Monterey."

A few minutes lag by, both of us looking out upon the ocean and Point Lobos beyond. And as if it were a second thought, she touches a portion of the tower and says "Here's a piece from the Great Wall."

Glass artwork by Richard Marquis featured at Walter/White gallery

GLASS ART by Richard Marquis and his Noble Effort studio is being featured at the Walter/White Fine Arts Gallery until Sept. 15. Marquis, who is one of the major figures of the studio art glass movement, makes functional vases in unusual shapes and non-functional sculptural pieces that resemble everyday items, like teapots, except they are made in the difficult "murrini" style of glass process.

Marquis, who was born in Bumblebee, Ariz. and makes his home in Washington State, received his M.A. from the University of California at Berkeley in 1971. He was awarded a Fulbright Fellowship in the late '60s to work and study at the Venini glass factory in Venice.

While there, he learned the murrini technique and introduced it to the contemporary American art glass scene. Unique to Marquis and Noble Effort are the whimsical combinations of motifs covering a variety of shapes: "teapots," murrini eggs, "volcanic cone" vessels, "party cone" vessels, "party" vases, "rocket" bottles, flower vases and bowl forms.

In addition to the murrini style in blown glass works, Marquis works in an ancient technique developed by Egyptian craftsmen centuries before the invention of the blowpipe. In this technique, vases are made by wrapping molten colored glass threads around a solid core. The glass is manipulated into the desired shape and pattern; then the core material is removed. The result is a small vessel with unique, varied characteristics of shape, pattern, texture and color.

Marquis' "signature" technique, murrini, has been used since the earliest days of glass making, but probably has never been varied in such imaginative ways as Noble Effort's creations. They start with various colored glass rods and assemble them in a cylinder about six inches tall by five inches in diameter. The desired design appears in the cross-section of the cylinder, not in side view.

The mass is heated to an extreme level, close to 2,000 degrees F, then pulled like taffy to a length of several yards, until it is reduced in diameter to that of a pencil. This stretched rod is cooled and sliced into small sections — the murrini. The miraculous quality of glass and the important feature of the murrini process is that with the stretching of the cylindrical mass the cross-section design is not distorted. Though the Egyptians used murrini for jewelry and furniture inlay, 1500 B.C., and the technique was known by the Romans, the Venetians of the Renaissance perfected the intricacies of the process. After a long fallow period, the process was revived by the famous French cristalleries of Baccarat, Saint-Louis and Clichy, who brought the style to a high level of expertise in their popular "mille fiori" (thousand flowers) paperweights in the 19th century.

Noble Effort Design was begun in 1982 when Marquis and Ronald Purser, a fellow glassblower and former commercial fisherman, joined forces. They set up a studio on an island in Puget Sound.

The Walter/White Galleries are located at Seventh and San Carlos, and on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth.

Art exhibit at GroveMont Theater features local artistic talent

LOCAL ARTIST and history teacher Ruth Jordan Allan is a busy woman. Between teaching history of art at Santa Catalina School and stage craft at Monterey Peninsula College, she also manages travel to Egypt so she can paint.

Now, coinciding with the opening of The Gallery in the GroveMont Theater Arts Center, Allan will exhibit her paintings beginning this weekend, Aug. 29-31.

Allan's styles reflect an eclecticism, based on several of the 20th century artists, including the Cubists and such diverse people as Frank Stella and Georgia O'Keeffe. However, the painter who "sits at her elbow" is Cezanne.

"Since college I have never consciously painted like Cezanne, but I can't deny he's a force in my life," Allan said.

Last November, Allan toured Egypt, sailing down the Nile observing the sights.

"The paintings (to be on exhibit) possibly reflect what I felt about being in Egypt," she said. "An American walking in a strange time, looking at a distant age. But it was not the tombs and temples which were strange; it was I who was strange — in those hushed halls of antiquity."

The Gallery will display works of local artists and will also make the room available to groups and individuals for workshops, classes, lectures and other uses determined on a proposal-by-proposal basis, said Stephen Moorer, executive director of the non-profit organization.

The Gallery will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and performance evenings from 6 to 7:45 p.m. Additional hours are 4 to 7 p.m. following Sunday matinees and also by appointment.

For further information call the GroveMont Theater Arts Center at 649-6852.

Artist Emy Ledbetter has vision to share

EMY LEDBETTER has a vision which she is more than happy to share with anyone willing to take a look at her paintings.

The local artist, who specializes in oils, pastels, and acrylics, will exhibit her work through September in Carmel.

"Others have tried to convince me to paint what is popular," Ledbetter said. "(But) I paint my visions with independence. I want my work to have power, not to control, but to touch people."

While Ledbetter learned some fundamentals at Fordham University and Monterey Peninsula College, she views conventional approaches to painting as "limiting."

"As a self-taught artist, I learned most of what I know through experimentation," she said. "Art courses came after I started painting."

Many of her paintings have an Oriental theme, which brims with sensitivity, vitality and explosive use of color.

Ledbetter says she is not sure where her Oriental theme comes from. "It just emerged," said the New York-born artist. "Prior to that, my paintings were more representational. Now my work is very subjective."

She believes her vision reaches people on many levels. "There is an inner peace within activity, which many people relate to on a very personal level. I want to leave clues yet leave the interpretation to the viewer," she said.

The exhibit, Images, will open 2 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 30, with a reception which is open to the public. It will continue 2 to 4:30 p.m., or by appointment, Wednesdays through Saturdays until Sept. 27 in Cherry Hall at Fourth Avenue and Guadalupe Street in Carmel.

For more information call 624-7491.

Texas beauty captured at Simic Art Gallery

THE DISTINCTIVE beauty of the Texas landscape and its trademark bluebonnets are captured in the paintings of William Slaughter. A one-man show of Slaughter's works opens Saturday, Aug. 23 at Simic Galleries in Carmel. The artist will be present during a 5 to 9 p.m. champagne reception.

Slaughter's bright palette of quilt-like colors creates a picturesque window into nature. The brilliant blues, intermixed with pink and white capped flowers stand pettily next to gnarled oaks and low growths of scrub brush and grass. Occasionally the human element enters into one of Slaughter's compositions—a small farm, a windmill churning on fruitful land, or an open gate leading into an abandoned homestead. He creates feelings of tranquility, serenity and peace.

Self-taught as an artist, Slaughter was influenced in his early years by the famed American landscape painter Robert Wood. Using sable brushes and European pigments, Slaughter strokes and dabs his paint onto the canvas, overlaying tones of color to develop his compositions. Through this technique, trees define themselves, rocks emerge and bluebonnets stand crisp in the foreground edging into the distance in a sea of blue. Highly skilled in his use of light and shadow, his soft clouds reflect billowy patterns to the trees and land below.

Simic Galleries maintains three locations on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue in Carmel. For additional information, call 624-7522.

LOCAL ARTIST Emy Ledbetter adds a distinct blend of character to her unique art, which will be exhibited from 2-4 p.m.

ON STAGE

Charley's Aunt

Charley's Aunt, a farcical portrayal of courtship involving two love-struck couples, will present its final performance this weekend.

Written by Brandon Thomas, the play revolves around two Oxford undergraduates and their attempts to declare marriage intentions to their sweethearts.

In trying to impress the girls, a hilarious farce develops in this comedy directed by James Dunn.

Performances will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Aug. 29 and 30, at Monterey Peninsula College.

Tickets are $8 general admission, $6 for students, seniors and military and $4 for children under 13. Advance tickets may be purchased by calling the MPC Box Office Tuesday through Saturday at 646-4213.

Pipe Dream

"It takes all kinds of people to make up the world," sings Ed "Doc" Ricketts in this Rodgers and Hammerstein musical about the Cannery Row denizens who populate Pipe Dream.

John Steinbeck's Sweet Thursday provided the inspiration for this 1955 musical, continuing at the outdoor Forest Theater in Carmel. Hamish Tyler directs Pipe Dream. Much of it is centered around Ricketts' laboratory on Cannery Row.

The musical plays 8 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays until Aug. 30 at the theater on Mountain View and Santa Rita in Carmel. Tickets are $6, $4 for students and senior citizens. The box office opens 7 p.m. Tickets can also be purchased in advance at Center Stage Ticketing, 467 Alvarado St., Monterey, 649-5561.

Audience members are encouraged to arrive early and bring a picnic to enjoy prior to curtain. Theatergoers are encouraged to dress warmly.

The Miss Firecracker Contest

Brookhaven, Miss. provides the setting for Beth Henley's play about the efforts of Carnelle Scott to win her town's version of the Miss Universe Pageant. Carnelle's compatriots include a disease-besieged carnival man and Popeye, who makes doll costumes for frogs.

The Miss Firecracker Contest continues at The Western Stage at 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 28. Tickets are $8.50 Fridays and Saturdays, $7.50 Sundays through Thursdays and matinees. The Western Stage is headquartered at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Reservations: 375-2111 or 758-1221.

A Fool's Paradise

A turn-of-the-century whodunit in which an enterprising wife tries to relieve herself of her husband plays at California's First Theatre.

A Fool's Paradise continues at 8 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays and 8:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through August at the oldest theater in the state, Scott and Pacific streets, Monterey.

Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for seniors and teens and $3 for children 12 and younger. For information, call 375-4916 between 1 p.m. and show time.

No Sex Please, We're British!

A bedroom farce that focuses on the misadventures of a newly married couple continues at The Studio Theatre-Restaurant.

The cast includes Vicki Blaszcak as the bride, Geoff Johnston as her husband, Charles Smith as a visiting bank inspector and Robert Basgall as a muddled friend.

Dinner is at 7 p.m. with an 8:30 p.m. curtain Thursdays through Saturdays at the dinner-theater on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues, Carmel. Dinner and show price is $24.50 per person, exclusive of tax and gratuity. Tickets: 624-1661.

A Little Night Music

Stephen Sondheim's musical romp in the country, A Little Night Music, continues at The Wharf Theater in Monterey.

The musical, which features such songs as "Send in the Clowns," is directed by Gina Welch. The cast includes Eleanor Wyld, Larry Ayo, Kelly Alexander, Renata Yundt, Connie Erickson, Sarah Welch and Norman Stottmeister.

Curtain is at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays and 8 p.m. Sundays until Sept. 7.

Tickets are $8 and $10. The Wharf Theater is on Old Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey. Reservations: 372-2882 or 372-1373.

A Chorus Line

Choreography by Lorenzo Aragon and direction by Roxanne Captor distinguish The Western Stage production of A Chorus Line.

Broadway's longest-running show has been reworked by the Western Stage ensemble, but retains Michael Bennett's songs, including "At the Ballet," "What I Did for Love" and "One."

The musical closes at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 30. Tickets are $13 and $10. The Western Stage is headquartered at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Reservations: 375-2111 or 758-1221.

Pump Boys and Dinettes

A country, gospel and rockabilly revue plays The Western Stage with the arrival of Pump Boys and Dinettes. This collaboratively written piece is part theater and part musical concert. It is set on Highway 58 somewhere between Frog Level and Smirna, in the vicinity of the Double Cupp Diner run by Prudie and Rhetta Cupp.

The show plays at 5 and 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 23. Western Stage tickets are $8.50 Fridays and Saturdays, $7.50 Sundays through Thursdays and matinees. The Western Stage is headquartered at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Reservations: 375-2111 or 758-1221.

The Tempest

The Western Stage of Hartnell College presents William Shakespeare's magical farewell to the theater, The Tempest. Spirits, goddesses, witches, magicians, lovers, fools, plus a few ordinary men, abound in this play.

The Tempest continues at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 27. Tickets are $8.50 Fridays and Saturdays, $7.50 Sundays through Thursdays and matinees. The Western Stage is headquartered at Hartnell College, 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Reservations: 375-2111 or 758-1221.

Painting Churches

GroveMonte Theater Arts Center will present its third in a series of three productions written by and about women, when the Festival of Women's Plays presents Painting Churches beginning this weekend.

A comedic drama by Tina Howe, author of Museum and The Art of Dining, Painting Churches is the story of Gardner and Fanny Church who, with their daughter Mags, prepare to move out of their summer cottage on Cape Cod. Gardner, once a famous poet, slips in and out of senility as his wife Franny valiantly tries to keep them both afloat. While Mags, home to help them move, tries to paint a family portrait.

Painting Churches will open at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 29, at the GroveMont Theater Arts Center at 320 Hoffman in New Monterey. The play will continue Thursday through Saturday evenings through Saturday, Sept. 27. Sunday matinees are scheduled at 2 p.m. on Sept. 7 and 14.

Ticket prices are $6.50 general and $5 students and seniors. For further information and group rates call 649-6852.

A half-priced preview show will be presented on Thursday, Aug. 29, at 8 p.m.

Communicating in the workplace

A seminar designed to help businesses, non-profit organizations and individuals to improve communication and management skills will be offered by the Management Institute of Monterey.

Participants in the seminar will have an opportunity to assess their communication style and to learn to use effective communication to motivate people, resolve conflicts and accomplish goals.

Cost for the seminar is $25 for the full day and $15 for the half-day. Proceeds will go toward a scholarship fund. The seminar will be offered from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 3 at the Monterey Conference Center. To register, call 373-5112.

This work shall be done in accordance with the Specifications therefore adopted, to which special reference is hereby made.

The Contractor must comply with Sections 6705, 6706, and 6707 of the Labor Code regarding trenching requirements, and Section 4551 of the Government Code regarding Assignments of Rights under the Clayton Act and Corright Act.

Pursuant to the Statutes of the State of California, the district board has adopted the general prevailing rates for overtime and legal holidays in the locality in which the work is to be performed determined by the State Director of the Department of Industrial Relations.

It shall be incumbent upon the successful bidder to pay not less than the minimum hourly wages required by said Schedule of Wage Determinations to be paid to the various laborers and mechanics employed directly upon the site of the work. In the event that any change in the above rates is made, said changed rates shall apply to this public project without adjustment in bid price.

The district reserves the right to reject any and all bids or to waive any irregularities or informalities in any bid or in the bidding.

No bidder shall withdraw his bid for a period of thirty (30) calendar days after the date set by the district for the opening thereof.

The work is to be completed within thirty (30) consecutive calendar days.

Specifications and proposal forms may be secured at no charge from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, 187 Eldorado Street, Suite E, P.O. Box 85, Monterey, Calif. 93940.

ART NOTES

BY SAM COLBURN

What is art?

RECENTLY THE problem of fake or bogus art being sold in Carmel was brought up before the City Council. Mr. Eastwood said that he would investigate.

This is a "sticky wicket." What is such art? I have known painters in Carmel who worked five or six canvases at the same time. What they were doing was repeating the same themes time and again. Schlock is a certain remorseless repetition of hackneyed images. What do you do about that? Legislate? I have known hotel chains to have sales of art. For what reason I don't know, but there would be genuine oils priced at 15 to 40 dollars. The artists who manufactured them were probably paid five to 10 dollars each.

I have read that Leroy Neiman is the wealthiest artist in the world. I have seen color sketches of his reproduced in magazines. They have the honesty of direct, personal seeing. They were done at the "ringside." His posters are something else. Whether the sports scene is tennis, tiddle-de-winks, or trampoline, the original image is obviously photographic. Paint is then splattered on. There is no relation, other than purely casual, between the color and the sports subject. This is bad art.

Getting on to the real thing, let me discuss the current one-man shows at the Carmel Art Association. In the Center Gallery is the work of Frank Ashley. This consists of self-portraits, and of large drawings on paper. They are all satirical. The naked, male figure playing jazz is superbly drawn. His views of himself are varied and funny. One portrait I would call The Three Day Hangover. There is the look of "what have I done to myself?" but in the eyes, which are like wells, there is an ultimate sanity.

Showing in the Beardsley Gallery are three painters, Victor Di Gesu, Janet De la Roche, and Jay Hannah. All three have been painting for years. They are mature artists. Hannah does what he calls experimental work, but it shows an acute and very practiced eye. He is finding out how color works. He does this without subject matter as the brain receives the color directly and does not have to associate it with any material form. These paintings show how color changes at certain distances.

In Four Color Light what you see is different at short, middle and long distances due to the wave color frequencies. The squares look in part, at different distances, as if they were lit up, and some look metallic. Warm colors come forward with distance in Indigo Green Violet, and thus the painting changes. Cobalt Violet Blue has powerful vibes. Cobalt Violet Red has the same actual cobalt violet, but it looks warmer. Jay Hannah is giving us some very precise insights into color perception.

Both Victor Di Gesu and Janet de la Roche are painters. You may well think that this is the most obvious remark one could make, but some artists spray, others scrape, and some sand the paint down before another coat. It does not make that much difference as what the artist has to say is more important, but with these two the paint has a quality of its own.

Janet lets the color and paint work for itself as in Seascape with Warm Clouds or in Land of Broken Promises. She has let the paint run in these works and achieves form not born of the brush. I like a small oil, Striped Tablecloth, with its effective use of reds and greens. She also is showing a wood sculpture, El Salvador, which is painted and is poignant.

Victor Di Gesu is showing, besides his oils, some one-time wood block prints. As I understand it, soft wood is used and only one printing is possible. La Duena, Nude With Shawl, and Girl Combing Hair are these monotypes, and there is a certain softness which is intriguing. In the paintings the pigment has texture and a certain looseness. This creates a plastic form, which is the result of the color and the shapes of the color masses, that is perhaps more important than the subject matter. In some of these paintings the tone values are very close but form is there and so is feeling. I like Alix in Tennis Shoes and Michaela as Miss Marple.

Besides the four artists whose work has been discussed, there is another one-man show at the Carmel Art Association. Modesty and conflict of interest forbid any review of these drawings and ink washes.

Over at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art you may see a showing of Paintings at Night in which Charles Rollo Peters is represented. He was a local artist whose dark oils are romantic with a great feeling for those hours when the only light came from human habitations or from the moon.

A stately pose

MOTHER AND daughter (Connie Fredrickson and Fredricka Armfeld) strike pose in a scene from Stephen Sondheim's A Little Night Music at the Wharf Theater through Sunday, Sept. 7.

Also at this museum are Japanese woodblock prints, some from the 16th and 17th centuries, and some from a period, 1860 to 1890, and are known as Yokohama prints. What is very interesting is the brilliance of color, and crispness of printing. It is a detailed recording of life at that time with no attempt at perspective. Our intrusion into those island waters is shown in the militant arrival of Commodore Perry.

ROUNDUP

Licensing orientation conducted

There will be an orientation meeting for people interested in applying for a license to operate child care centers or family day care centers.

The child care center orientation will take place 1 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 21 and the orientation for day care homes will begin at 2 p.m.

Both meetings will be held in the Seaside Library, 550 Harcourt Ave., Seaside. For additional information, call 754-2212 or 899-2571.

AIDS Project assists locals

WHAT'S PLAYING AT THE MOVIES

ABOUT LAST NIGHT: This comedy focuses on four young singles and their attempts to fall in love. The cast includes Jim Belushi, Rob Lowe, Demi Moore and Elizabeth Perkins. Edward Zwick directs. At the Hill Theatre. 375-2800. Ends Thursday, Aug. 28.

ALIENS: Sigourney Weaver stars in this sequel to the 1979 sci-fi thriller. Alien, as an astronaut threatened by a horrific creature capable of assuming any shape. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at the Cinema 70. 373-4777.

ARMED AND DANGEROUS:

John Candy and Eugene Levy co-star as two inept misfits who become Los Angeles rent-a-cops. Mark L. Lester (Commando) directed the comedy. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at Carmel Village Theatre. 624-5341.

BACK TO SCHOOL: Rodney Dangerfield stars in this comedy. Rated PG-13. At the Hill Theatre. 375-2800. Ends Aug. 28.

EXTREMITIES: Adapted by William Mastrosimone from his controversial play. Farrah Fawcett, James Russo and Alfie Woodard co-star in this drama about a young woman who overpowers a male attacker and must decide whether or not to kill him. Robert M. Young (Short Eyes, The Ballad of Gregorio Cortez) directs. Rated R. At the Valley Cinema. 624-5111. Ends Aug. 28.

A FINE MESS: A new comedy directed by Blake Edwards. Ted Danson and Howie Mandel co-star in this story of the escapades of two friends and their encounters with the Mafia, a fixed horse race and $10,000. Through Sept. 4 at the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

Born American: Begins Friday, Aug. 29 at the Hill Theatre. 375-2800.

Bullies and Dream: Both films rated PG-13 begins Friday, Aug. 29 at the Valley Cinema. 624-5111.

STAND BY ME: A charmingly acted saga of four kids on a weekend adventure in search of a dead boy, based on a sentimental Stephen King story. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at the Golden Bough Theatre. 624-4044.

THE FLY: Jeff Goldblum stars in the remake of the classic science fiction horror story about a man who becomes a human fly. Goldblum portrays an unhappy scientist whose molecules are scrambled up with those of a common housefly. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

TOUCH AND GO: Rated R. Begins Aug. 29 at the Crossroads Cinema. 624-2792.

NOTHING IN COMMON: This dramatic comedy focuses on an ambitious young advertising agent whose life is shattered when his parents divorce after 34 years of marriage. Tom Hanks, Jackie Gleason and Eva Marie Saint co-star. Rated PG. Through Sept. 4 at the Crossroads Cinema. 624-2792.

ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW: A send-up of remembered monster movies, with the added twist of music, "The Time Warp." "Over at the Frankenstein Place," and an audience that seems to know the lines better than the actors. A long-standing cult classic. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

ROOM WITH A VIEW: E.M. Forster's novel provides the basis for this film about a young Englishwoman (Helena Bonham-Carter) whose trip to Florence with a strait-laced chaperone (Maggie Smith) casts a lively shadow over her future. Through Sept. 4 at the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

RUNNING SCARED: Gregory Hines and Billy Crystal are a team of fast-talking crime fighters in Chicago. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at the Dream Theater. 372-1331.

RUTHLESS PEOPLE: Bette Midler and Danny DeVito portray, respectively, an obnoxious woman and her loathsome husband. He is delighted when she is kidnapped, but she proves so disagreeable that the kidnapers beg the husband to take her back. Rated R. Through Sept. 4 at the Regency Theatre. 375-6696.

THE TEXAS CHAINSAW MASSACRE, PART 2: In this sequel to the cult cannibal thriller, Dennis Hopper stars as a man obsessively pursuing the vicious Chainsaw Family, now engaged in a Sweeney Todd-type enterprise of selling yuppie sausages. No rating. At the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555. Ends Aug. 28.

TOP GUN: Tom Cruise is a maverick F-14 pilot and Kelly McGillis is an astrophysicist in this adventure film set in the world of jet fighter pilots attending the Navy's Fighter Weapons School. Through Sept. 4 at the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

Reform School Girls and Back to School: Begins Friday, Aug. 29 at the State Three Cinemas. 372-4555.

OCEANFRONT CARMEL

The Best of The Best, along Carmel's Scenic Road, a masterwork in glass, hardwood, slate, tile, and brass with open beamed ceilings; this captivatingly spacious 3 bedroom, 3 bath residence is picturebook perfect. Living room of glass, artfully designed for privacy, overlooks sand and surf, with panorama from Carmel Point to The 18th Hole at Pebble Beach. Formal dining room offers hardwood floors, a window bay and a multitude of built-in cabinetry, and a super breakfast alcove which opens to a secluded brick patio and English gardens. Add a superior master suite, downstairs guest quarters, and that million dollar ocean view - at $895,000 this home is a once-in-a-lifetime discovery.

WHEN YOU CAN AFFORD TO LIVE ANYWHERE, WHY LIVE ANYWHERE ELSE?

You've waited a lifetime, and now the opportunity is here — opening to the 4th green and 5th tee of Monterey Peninsula Country Club's Shore Course in Pebble Beach, with ocean expanses beyond, this sumptuous new contemporary is spacious yet intimate, warm yet cosmopolitan. Local architects Bredthauer/Curran have created a stunning statement in natural redwood and marble, copper and elegant tile, wall and floor coverings; a liberating kitchen (which includes Subzero and Thermador, triple Jenn Air and Kitchenaid), hideaway library/study, three bedroom suites, including a master suite that defies comparison. Plan ample time to inspect the impeccably crafted detail of this newly-completed masterpiece — living area totals approximately 4,000 square feet, and the views are limitless. Well-worth $1,100,000.

NEWLY LISTED IN CARMEL VIEWS GRAND VIEW CONTEMPORARY

Magnificent views of Pt. Lobos, mountains, valley and sea highlight an extra spacious Carmel Views contemporary. Thoughtful design allows for easy-entertaining flow and a sense of family privacy. The living room with redwood ceiling, and stone fireplace opens to expansive view deck. A stone entry leads to an oversized dining room. While the kitchen is attractive to the eye, the functional amenities include compactor, JennAir and Kitchenaid appliances, and center island butcher-block with wet bar. A breakfast/family room features a built-in desk and a counter for casual meals and conversation. The newer studio wing, complete with bath, wet bar, music center, and darkroom, is an exciting retreat for the artist, or would also be ideally suited to long term guests. Three bedrooms, three full baths, include a master suite with dual wardrobes, dressing area with dual sinks, and a serene garden view. A grand setting on over 1/2 acre of gardens with gazebo provides the ideal backdrop for this luxurious residence — never-before on the market, offered at $527,000.

VALUE-PRICED IN PEBBLE BEACH A HOME FOR ALL REASONS

Included in this family-ideal 3 bedroom, 2 bath home are elaborate home-office, huge workshop, and triple garage. Location is serene and secluded — a wooded lot on a sleepy lane. A circular drive entry greets family and guests. Living room features a floor-to-ceiling fireplace of brick and slate raised hearth. Kitchen features a large dining area with a brick barbecue and skylights. Family room enjoys a handsome wet bar and wood paneling. All three bedrooms (including a great master suite) are unusually spacious. Offered at $284,500.

FUN AND GAMES

SUMMER FUN in Pebble Beach! Only steps from Monterey Peninsula Country Club, an immaculate family home with a spacious interior and convenient floor plan. You'll feel right at home in the big living room with its high, vaulted ceiling and dramatic fireplace, the inviting family room with its fireplace and built-in barbecue, the nice dining room, and the pleasant deck overlooking the garden. Three bedrooms, two baths. $295,000.

PEBBLE BEACH FOR YOU

FOR THE SMALL FAMILY...a very nice home on a quiet cul-de-sac in Pebble Beach, off Bird Rock and not far from Monterey Peninsula Country Club. It has been completely done over with YOU in mind...new kitchen, new baths, new carpeting, new flooring and new paint. Three bedrooms, two baths, and a large fenced yard for toddlers and pets. $229,000. Owner will consider trade down for Pacific Grove.

ATTENTION INVESTORS

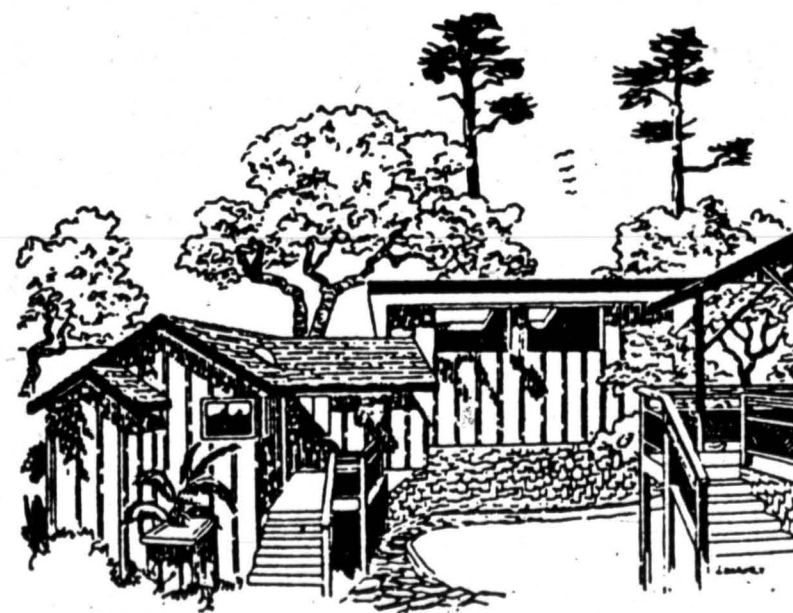

IN PACIFIC GROVE...a nicely remodeled home in an R-4 zone that could be used as an office and home, or as a mix of professional offices. It's quite close to downtown, and there's ample off-street parking to the rear. $179,500.

OCEAN FRONT HOME on the SOUTH SUR COAST

This 1600 sq. ft. home was designed by its architect/owner for his personal residence. Completed in 1980, with a sod roof blending naturally into its site, development probably could not be duplicated today, under the California Coastal Act. All partitions are shear-wall for earthquake safety the house is set back 70' from the 110' bluff, overlooking the ocean.

The bay window at the south end of the living room is a wonderful spot in which to curl up to dream, read or watch the ever changing ocean. Just off this area is the master bedroom and bath, completely separated from the other bedrooms and bath, which could be used for guest or caretaker's quarters.

A Vermont castings Parlor Stove (not pictured) enhances the cozy indoor environment. The kitchen, at the north end of the living area, is separated by a half wall. This room also opens to the ocean-side deck, for further dining convenience. Beyond the deck are extensive gardens and orchards which thrive in this warm, sunny climate.

This lovely 5.25 acre, mostly level site is situated mid-way between Carmel and San Simeon (43 miles each way). Enjoyment of sea birds, seals, otters and whales are but a few delights of life here on the South Sur Coast. Price is $335,000; please call our Coast Properties Division for further details and an appointment to see this special home.
